Clay Miner Declares he Was Not Pomeroy Policeman.

DESCRIBES FIGHT

Case Will Not go to Jury Before Noon Wednesday.

William A. Wolfe, 25, East End clay miner, resumed the witness stand in his own defense at his trial on a second degree murder charge in common pleas court, Lisbon, today.

Wolfe, who is alleged to have shot and killed Mrs. Flora Dearth, Mulberry street restaurant owner, told the story of his life under direct examination by Attorney F. E. Grosshans, of the defense.

May Go To Jury Wednesday.

Indications are the case will go to the jury before Wednesday morning.

The accused, who began his testimony shortly before adjournment Monday afternoon, was the first witness called after Judge Carl H. Smith of Steubenville opened court at 9:30 o'clock.

Cross-examination by Prosecutor Hanley brought out the fact that Wolfe has had trouble with people in East End, but that nothing serious followed. Wolfe declared that he never did police work in Pomeroy, as it had been previously testified that he said he did and that the trouble he had with a man named Petit was prompted by Petit calling him a "stool pigeon."

"Sure, it ain't," Wolfe replied.

Flames, of Mysterious Origin, Came From Beneath Stairway Where Baby Buggy Had Been Standing, Indicating That Firebugs, Who Have Been Operating in District, Were Responsible.

MAN AND TWO WOMEN ARE IDENTIFIED; OTHERS CHARRED BEYOND RECOGNITION

Tragically Evident That 50 Tenants in Five-Story Structure Made Desperate Efforts to Escape After Alarm Was Sounded—All Bodies Found in Hallways by Firemen.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—Six persons, two women and four men, were burned to death in a mysterious fire which swept through a five-story tenement at 13 East Ninety-eight street, early today. Five others are missing.

Edward Russell, 64, a tenant on the fifth floor, was positively identified. Of the other dead, the police said they believed two of them to be Miss Ida Goldberg, who has been living with a family on the fourth floor, and Mrs. Minnie McShane, whose husband is a prison turnkey. Other bodies, the police say, are charred beyond recognition.

The fire was of a mysterious origin and broke out at 2:30 o'clock this morning. Solomon S. Selig, a lawyer, who was enroute to his home in an automobile, saw flames in the hallway and turned in an alarm.

There were fifty or more tenants in the building and the authorities said they were unable to account for a considerable number of these. The tenement was located in what the police have come to term the "pyromaniac district" because of the recurring number of mysterious fires there.

Man Plunges To Death.

The flames, according to a family named Brevda which escaped, came from beneath a stairway where a baby buggy had been standing. Pyromaniacs, who have been operating in the East Side district have, wherever possible, set fire to baby buggies in hallways.

It was tragically evident, as police searched the charred structure, for victims, that the tennants had made desperate efforts to escape after the alarm of fire had been sounded, for all bodies, except that of a woman, were found in the hallways. The body of the woman was discovered in the Moshane apartment on the fifth floor. The police believed that she was suffocated by smoke.

From the roof of an adjoining structure, firemen saw a man hanging from the sill of a fifth floor window. Below him was a vacant lot. A life rope was let down to him and the firemen called to him to knot it about his waist. Instead of doing this he grasped the rope and started to climb hand over hand to the roof. Al-

Musical Comedy Composer's Wife Dies in New York.

BAFFLING CASE

Herbert Stoteheart Says Victim Was Jealous and High Strung.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—Mrs. Dorothy Stotheart, 27, wife of Herbert Stotheart, composer of musical comedies, died of poison today in her apartment in the exclusive Pomander Walk Colony under circumstances prompting a police investigation. Officers could not say definitely the poison which killed her, or why she took it.

Stotheart told police his wife came into the living room of their apartment at 3 a. m. He was at the piano working on a composition. She knelt before him, he said, after first kneeling in front of an empty chair. He tried first aid measures after calling an ambulance, but she did not respond. A physician the husband called also tried resusciative measures, but Mrs. Stotheart died quickly and apparently without pain, Stotheart said.

He said his wife was highly strung and jealous, and that his work placed him in positions furnishing a jealous and imaginative woman with cause for worry.

Husband Admits Quarrel.

He is a handsome man and while admitting frankly that he did not believe he had given his wife real cause for jealousy, he added equally frankly that other women had been attracted to him despite his wishes.

Stotheart has had many successes on Broadway. The most recent and most successful being "Rose Marie."

Stotheart told police he had gone to the theatre alone last night, to study some catchy music. His temperament, he said, demanded that he be alone on such excursions.

UNCLE SAM PLANS GIGANTIC FREIGHT AND PASSENGER AIR LINE LINKING CENTERS HERE AND ABROAD

BY DAVID J. WALKER.
(Copyright, 1924, by I. N. S.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16—Plans for the formation by the government of a gigantic freight and passenger air line linking important centers of the United States and later extending to South America and Asia are being drawn up by Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, assistant chief of the Army Air service, he announced today.

The proposal, which calls for organization of an aircraft organization similar to the Inland Waterways corporation of war-time, would be capitalized at $5,000,000 and under the direction of the War department.

The purpose of the project as outlined by General Mitchell would be the development of commercial flying to show what the cost would be so that private lines could buy the government holdings when public interest was aroused.

Planes are to be built to go anywhere in the world.

"With proper equipment the flight from New York to Peking via Canada, could be made in sixty or seventy hours," said General Mitchell in commenting on the plan.

"The government must take the initiative in developing commercial flying, to prove its value. Air lines would be a great help in our economic life as there is a real need today for some means of speedily transporting passengers and light, valuable freight such as jewels and money.

All countries, and particularly the United States, will support such transportation facilities and our government is the logical organizer of such a service."

The plan, according to General Mitchell, bodily eliminates government subsidies or private lines, a practice which though in use in Europe has met with opposition here.

He believes, it would require a year or more to construct the proper type of craft and perfect arrangements so that when once inaugurated, it would be successful.

War Department Must Approve.

Present air mail routes would be followed at the start and later equipment that could make the flight across the Pacific to China with three or four stops would be built.

The South American line is, if anything, needed more today than the Asiatic, because of the length of time it requires to reach the continent on the comparatively slow ocean carriers, General Mitchell said.

"The main reason why private organizations have not entered the field so far is the lack of definite knowledge as to cost and safety. The air mail did much to reveal how little danger there really is in daily flying. It now remains for some organization to establish the cost of modern freight planes on a daily schedule.

"The government is the logi-

Herbert Stoteheart Says Victim Was Jealous and High Strung.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—Mrs. Dorothy Stotheart, 27, wife of Herbert Stotheart, composer of musical comedies, died of poison today in her apartment in the exclusive Pomander Walk Colony under circumstances prompting a police investigation. Officers could not say definitely the poison which killed her, or why she took it.

Stotheart told police his wife came into the living room of their apartment at 3 a. m. He was at the piano working on a composition. She knelt before him, he said, after first kneeling in front of an empty chair. He tried first aid measures after calling an ambulance, but she did not respond. A physician the husband called also tried resusciative measures, but Mrs. Stotheart died quickly and apparently without pain, Stotheart said.

He said his wife was highly strung and jealous, and that his work placed him in positions furnishing a jealous and imaginative woman with cause for worry.

Husband Admits Quarrel.

He is a handsome man and while admitting frankly that he did not believe he had given his wife real cause for jealousy, he added equally frankly that other women had been attracted to him despite his wishes.

Stotheart has had many successes on Broadway. The most recent and most successful being "Rose Marie."

Stotheart told police he had gone to the theatre alone last night, to study some catchy music. His temperament, he said, demanded that he be alone on such excursions.

UNCLE SAM PLANS GIGANTIC FREIGHT AND PASSENGER AIR LINE LINKING CENTERS HERE AND ABROAD

BY DAVID J. WALKER.
(Copyright, 1924, by I. N. S.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16—Plans for the formation by the government of a gigantic freight and passenger air line linking important centers of the United States and later extending to South America and Asia are being drawn up by Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, assistant chief of the Army Air service, he announced today.

The proposal, which calls for organization of an aircraft organization similar to the Inland Waterways corporation of war-time, would be capitalized at $5,000,000 and under the direction of the War department.

The purpose of the project as outlined by General Mitchell would be the development of commercial flying to show what the cost would be so that private lines could buy the government holdings when public interest was aroused.

Planes are to be built to go anywhere in the world.

"With proper equipment the flight from New York to Peking via Canada, could be made in sixty or seventy hours," said General Mitchell in commenting on the plan.

"The government must take the initiative in developing commercial flying, to prove its value. Air lines would be a great help in our economic life as there is a real need today for some means of speedily transporting passengers and light, valuable freight such as jewels and money.

All countries, and particularly the United States, will support such transportation facilities and our government is the logical organizer of such a service."

The plan, according to General Mitchell, bodily eliminates government subsidies or private lines, a practice which though in use in Europe has met with opposition here.

He believes, it would require a year or more to construct the proper type of craft and perfect arrangements so that when once inaugurated, it would be successful.

War Department Must Approve.

Present air mail routes would be followed at the start and later equipment that could make the flight across the Pacific to China with three or four stops would be built.

The South American line is, if anything, needed more today than the Asiatic, because of the length of time it requires to reach the continent on the comparatively slow ocean carriers, General Mitchell said.

"The main reason why private organizations have not entered the field so far is the lack of definite knowledge as to cost and safety. The air mail did much to reveal how little danger there really is in daily flying. It now remains for some organization to establish the cost of modern freight planes on a daily schedule.

"The government is the logi-

WILLIAM WOLFE TELLS JURORS STORY OF EAST END SHOOTING

Clay Miner Declares he Was Not Pomeroy Policeman.

DESCRIBES FIGHT

Case Will Not go to Jury Before Noon Wednesday.

William A. Wolfe, 25, East End clay miner, resumed the witness stand in his own defense at his trial on a second degree murder charge in common pleas court, Lisbon, today.

Wolfe, who is alleged to have shot and killed Mrs. Flora Dearth, Mulberry street restaurant owner, told the story of his life under direct examination by Attorney F. E. Grosshans, of the defense.

May Go To Jury Wednesday.

Indications are the case will go to the jury before Wednesday morning.

The accused, who began his testimony shortly before adjournment Monday afternoon, was the first witness called after Judge Carl H. Smith of Steubenville opened court at 9:30 o'clock.

Cross-examination by Prosecutor Hanley brought out the fact that Wolfe has had trouble with people in East End, but that nothing serious followed. Wolfe declared that he never did police work in Pomeroy, as it had been previously testified that he said he did and that the trouble he had with a man named Petit was prompted by Petit calling him a "stool pigeon."

"Sure, it ain't," Wolfe replied.

Patients suffer horrible convulsions, coma and are affected mentally," he said.

"No one can be sure of the source of liquor nowadays," declared Dr. Monaghan. "The use of wood alcohol causes almost certain death or at least blindness.

"The health department can do nothing in connection with poison liquor epidemic other than warn all citizens. Selling liquor is an illicit traffic and a police matter."

6 ARE DEAD, AND 5 MISSING IN TENEMENT FIRE

BLAZE SWEEPS BUILDING IN "PYROMANIAC ZONE" OF EAST SIDE, NEW YORK

Flames, of Mysterious Origin, Came From Beneath Stairway Where Baby Buggy Had Been Standing, Indicating That Firebugs, Who Have Been Operating in District, Were Responsible.

MAN AND TWO WOMEN ARE IDENTIFIED; OTHERS CHARRED BEYOND RECOGNITION

Tragically Evident That 50 Tenants in Five-Story Structure Made Desperate Efforts to Escape After Alarm Was Sounded—All Bodies Found in Hallways by Firemen.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—Six persons, two women and four men, were burned to death in a mysterious fire which swept through a five-story tenement at 13 East Ninety-eight street, early today. Five others are missing.

Edward Russell, 64, a tenant on the fifth floor, was positively identified. Of the other dead, the police said they believed two of them to be Miss Ida Goldberg, who has been living with a family on the fourth floor, and Mrs. Minnie McShane, whose husband is a prison turnkey. Other bodies, the police say, are charred beyond recognition.

The fire was of a mysterious origin and broke out at 2:30 o'clock this morning. Solomon S. Selig, a lawyer, who was enroute to his home in an automobile, saw flames in the hallway and turned in an alarm.

There were fifty or more tenants in the building and the authorities said they were unable to account for a considerable number of these. The tenement was located in what the police have come to term the "pyromaniac district" because of the recurring number of mysterious fires there.

Man Plunges To Death.

The flames, according to a family named Brevda which escaped, came from beneath a stairway where a baby buggy had been standing. Pyromaniacs, who have been operating in the East Side district have, wherever possible, set fire to baby buggies in hallways.

It was tragically evident, as police searched the charred structure, for victims, that the tennants had made desperate efforts to escape after the alarm of fire had been sounded, for all bodies, except that of a woman, were found in the hallways. The body of the woman was discovered in the Moshane apartment on the fifth floor. The police believed that she was suffocated by smoke.

From the roof of an adjoining structure, firemen saw a man hanging from the sill of a fifth floor window. Below him was a vacant lot. A life rope was let down to him and the firemen called to him to knot it about his waist. Instead of doing this he grasped the rope and started to climb hand over hand to the roof. Al-

"Madame Butterfly" Will be Presented at Ceramic Theatre.

Grand opera lovers in East Liverpool are looking forward eagerly to the coming visit of the San Carlo Grand Opera company to the Ceramic theatre, Thursday evening, January 15, when Fortune Gallo will present his organization in a performance of "Madame Butterfly."

The success of the San Carlo company this season has been phenomenal. Entering upon its ninth annual engagement in New York, this company opened the new Jolson theatre, playing four weeks to capacity houses. This engagement was followed by two-weeks visits to Boston and Philadelphia, after which the coast-to-coast tour follows, when nearly every city in the country will be visited.

Conspicuous among the artists who will sing in East Liverpool is Miss Elda Vettori. Miss Vettori has often been called the most beautiful woman on the operatic stage. And to personal beauty she adds a voice of great beauty and of the true dramatic timbre. Also she is a singing actress of the highest order—a singer who acts as well as she sings.

Many old favorites, greatly esteemed by local music lovers, will be heard, as well as several new singers. Never before has this producer presented so many brilliant stars in one season, and never such a well organized chorus or thoroughly trained orchestra. East Liverpool can look forward confidently to one of its most resplendent operatic events, for the San Carlo Grand Opera company this year overwhelmingly surpasses and breaks all past records.

There is no other company in the country that has a higher general personnel. It is the only permanently organized grand opera company touring in America today.

At his request, she brought him a pen, that he might jot down the combinations of notes as he played them. She quietly returned to the bed room. The she came back to the living room.

An autopsy will be held immediately. Police could find no trace of a poison in the apartment. The aunt said she had found crystals in a glass of water in the kitchen but had thought nothing of it, and allowed them to be washed down the sink.

became connected with the Metropolitian Opera Company. As a consequence, Claudia Muzio's entire childhood was spent watching and hearing the great singers in rehearsal as well as in public performance. Until she was 16, the harp and the piano were her only mediums of musical expression but when it was found that she had a remarkable voice.

At this time, she returned to Italy where she studied under some of the most famous teachers of the land. Her progress was rapid and not long afterwards she made her debut in Milan then sang in London. Reports of her success in these places led to her engagement with the Metropolitan, where she scored her initial triumph in "Tosca."

ready seriously burned, and his strength weakened by hanging to the window sill, he had climbed only a few feet when his grasp on the rope loosened and he plunged to the ground. He was killed.

Dies Seeking Insurance Policy.

The body was partly indentified as that of a man whose name was Russell. His sister, Mrs. Anne Nugent, and her three children, Barbara, 78; Antoninette, 22, and Fred, 16, made their way to the ground down a fire escape. Mrs. Nugent and her son were slightly burned.

Mrs. McShane, believed to be one of the dead women, would be alive, her husband said, had she not gone back to get fire insurance papers which were in their rooms. McShane said he, his wife and their two children, Florence and William, 12, and 17, fled in their nightclothes to the fire escape. Once outside and with safety at hand, McShane said that his wife suddenly remembered that insurance policies covering their furniture were in a tin box in their room.

For a time there was a near panic among patients in the Mount Sinai hospital nearby. Nurses and internes went from room to room, assuring patients that there was no danger and pulling down window shades so that the patients could not see the fire.

ment that the citizen render personal service to the family, tribe or organization of which he was a member. With the decline of warfare and standing armies and the development of private capital, service was replaced by a payment of money.

"In mediaeval times the lords levied taxes under the name of rents. The only ones who paid were those who were too weak to resist. Thus to pay taxes other than by service was degrading. The Mohammedan theory was that only faithful Moslems should be allowed to render personal service to the state—that conquered Jews and Christians unworthy of that service should pay money taxes.

"There are two schools of thought which must be considered in looking to the future.

"First—There are those who believe that the primary function of taxation is to bring fortunes down to a common level, or, as has been stated, to equalize wealth; that the revenue end of taxation is secondary.

"Second—There are those who believe that tax laws should be considered only from the point of revenue. That they should not be concerned with remedying inequalities of wealth or used for bringing about social reforms. They believe such reforms should be left to separate and distinct legislation.

"If our lawmaking bodies in the future are to use taxes for purposes other than raising necessary revenues, we will have one kind of tax laws in the future. If we are to judge the future by the past, we have a rather unpleasant picture.

"The federal government has been reaching out into new fields of activity, has been taking on new obligations, such as the soldiers' bonus, road building, etc., and this, together with the so-called socialistic doctrine held by many of our lawmakers, that the purpose of the surtax, inheritance tax, and gift tax is to equalize wealth, has resulted in higher taxes than Secretary Mellon believes is necessary.

"Taking the total federal and state taxes the average citizen and business is compelled to pay, we can, judging solely from the past, see no relief in the future.

"It is possible under our present system of estate taxes for the estate of a man holding property in many States to be assessed a total tax of more than 100 per cent.

"An apt illustration of the present situation is to picture each State as a guest around a banquet table, each armed with a sharp tonged fork and Uncle Sam at the head of the table likewise armed. A platter heaped with food labeled "Estates of Decendents" is set down in the center of the table and every fork jabbed into it. The only part that the late jabber gets is two or three forks through his wrist.

"The State of Pennsylvania is also studying the tax question. The optimists among those who take an interest in tax problems are hoping for something tangible, while the pessimists are still in the majority."

Alleged Slayer

"What are you being tried for now?"

Invested in Restaurant.

Mr. Hanley then led the witness up to his going to the Dearth restaurant to live. Wolfe said that during the illness of Mrs. Dearth he looked after her and that she cared for him when he was sick. He also told of turning all his money over to Mrs. Dearth to put in the restaurant business under a sort of partnership arrangement. Wolfe testified that Mrs. Dearth was to give him a half interest in the business and the real estate.

"We were just friends," the witness declared.

Wolfe testified that he had several fights, but that he was never in a shooting scrape. He also said that he knew Mrs. Dearth never wrote him the letter which was testified about Monday.

He admitted, however, of talking about leaving the Dearth place, but Mrs. Dearth said to him that he should remain there.

"She begged me to stay," Wolfe said.

"She and the old man also wanted me there," the witness asserted.

Testimony showed that Wolfe gave Mrs. Dearth money the week before she was killed.

"Mrs. Dearth was an honest woman, that's why I gave her the money. She said she would make it right later on," he declared.

Pomeroy Friend is Witness

Columbus O. Hutton, 62, native of Pomeroy, testified that he knew Wolfe since he was a baby. Hutton came to East Liverpool two years ago. With his son and Wolfe, the defendant, he "batched" in one of the houses of the American Vitrified Co., East End, East Liverpool.

Hutton said that "a girl got around Arthur and he bought her a wrist watch, but I told him if he had any money to spend he should send it to his parents."

Hutton said that Wolfe had a revolver and penknife and that he bought them from the husband of Mrs. Dearth.

"I had trouble with Wolfe about his foolishness," Hutton declared. "At times he would cry. I knew of him drawing a knife on a fellow in East End and I always looked upon Arthur as a boy of weak mind."

Hutton testified that an uncle of the defendant had died in an asylum at Spencer, W. Va. He also said that he knew that Wolfe had never been in Kentucky, Columbus or Delaware working.

Uncle Died in Asylum.

S. H. Wolfe, 68, of Letart township, Meigs county, an uncle of the defendant, took the stand and told of his brother dying in the West Virginia asylum and that members of the family were weak mentally. The witness testified that Wolfe was never away from home more than two weeks at a time until he came to East Liverpool and that he had been working on farms near his home. He told of the prisoner being expelled from school and also of Wolfe striking him with an ax, breaking two of his ribs, when the witness wanted the defendant to assist in splitting some wood at their own home.

"I don't think his mind was ever developed," the elder Wolfe declared.

Mrs. Edna Carrollton, wife of Probate Judge Carrollton of Meigs county, a former school teacher, was called by the defense and testified that the defendant had been expelled from school and that he was considered feeble minded. Mrs. Carrollton was not cross-examined.

Mother is Called.

With her eyes closed, Mrs. Bertha Wolfe, aged 44, mother of the defendant, stood with upraised hands as she swore to tell the truth, just before entering the witness stand.

Mrs. Wolfe testified that she was the mother of 10 children and that she was one of a family of 10 children. She related that one of her daughters was married, lives near Delaware, O., and that another is married and lives in Kentucky.

Mrs. Wolfe, under direct examination by Attorney Grosshans, said that the defendant left home two years ago by boat for East Liverpool and that he never worked in Kentucky, nor Delaware, nor Columbus, "that I know of." She said Wolfe went to school until he was in the fourth reader and that he "left school because his mind was not inclined that way." She went on to relate that when she gave him advice that he would become angry. At other times he would go into the woods.

Dr. J. W. Chetwynd and Dr. C. H. Bailey, of East Liverpool, Dr. Seward Harris, of Lisbon, and Dr. Hyde, of Massillon, called by the defense are expected to testify this afternoon.

Wolfe's Life History.

The prisoner began his testimony in his own behalf at 4 p. m. yesterday.

Attorney Grosshans, under direct examination, brought out the story of Wolfe's early life. It has been six years since Wolfe has been back to the scene of his birth, three miles from Letart Falls, Meigs county.

"There were four children at home when I left and two were away from home then," Wolfe went on to relate. "There were Alice, Dennis, Dary and Kent down home, but Mary and Marjury were married. I went to work at common labor at Greenup, and left there for Columbus, O., where I worked on the railroad for several months, boarding near the station. Then I went to Delaware—'six miles' from Columbus and got a job on a farm, and four years ago I went to East Liverpool.

Story of Shooting.

Wolfe [illegible] he carried knives and guns with him, "but only when he was tradin' 'em."

"Now William, how did you get shot?" queried Mr. Grosshans.

"I don't know," he responded quickly.

"What time was it?"

Somewhere between 8 and 9 o'c[illegible]

"Did you ever have any trouble w[illegible]?"

"William Kennedy called me a stool pigeon several weeks before the shooting, but there was no one present when Kennedy and I had the trouble. After I hit Kennedy, he ran away to get 'Red' King and his bunch. Then George Beaver came into the restaurant one night and ordered a sandwich and a cup of coffee, and I gave him change from a $1 bill. He accused me of short changing him."

"Did you have a gun then?,' Wolfe was asked.

"There was one lying on the shelf".

"When did you know you was shot?"

"Anybody ever make any threats against you?"

"Yes, lots of them, but they didn't scare me."

"The only trouble I had was with Beaver and Kennedy."

Woman Testifies For State.

The state scored heavily during the afternoon session, when Mrs. Anna Johnson, residing at 1070 Pennsylvania avenue, East End, East Liverpool, who is employed as a ware brusher at the No. 2 plant of the Homer Laughlin China Co., testified she looked in the window of the restaurant of Mrs. Flora Dearth between the time of the first and second shots fired there the night of Oct. 3, last.

"When I passed the restaurant that night a man stood inside the room with his back toward me, and I saw a man or woman facing me, throw up their hands and fall to the floor," related Mrs. Johnston. I looked in the window again and then heard another shot and I saw the man fall. The two people were only a short distance from each other and I saw the fire and the smoke from the shots. Wolfe fell after the second shot. I did not see any other people in the room at the time of the shooting.

"I hastened my step down Mulberry street and met some boys, and to them I related what I had seen. They ran back toward the restaurant, but by that time a crowd had gathered but I continued on my way home. It so happened that in my passing the restaurant I saw both people fall."

"Did you go in the restaurant?" asked Mr. Hanley.

"No, indeed, I didn't," the witness replied.

"You didn't see Wolfe shoot, did you? asked Mr. Beck.

"No, but I saw fire and smoke from both shots."

"You didn't see a gun in the hands of either?"

"No, sir."

Chester Smith on Stand.

A death-like stillness crept over the crowded court room when Patrolman Chester Smith the first to reach Mrs. Dearth and Wolfe after the shooting described the scene.

"She was dead—lifeless and with blood covering her face," he said. "Wolfe was lying partly on his right side, with his left arm under his right side, and with a gun in his hand. "I grasped his hand with the gun, broke the gun, and took from the barrel two empty cartridge shells and three loaded shells. I smelled the gun and then knew that it had been fired. There was a powder burn on the left cheek of Wolfe. There was a bullet hole in the plaster.

"I asked Wolfe what he had done the shooting for and he replied, 'I didn't do it.'

"Who did the shooting, I again asked him and he replied this time that 'George Beaver did it.' I then asked him what it was all about and he came back with the statement that 'it was over the dishes.'

Mr. Smith then told of calling assistance and of the removal of Wolfe to the East Liverpool hospital, and the summoning of an undertaker.

The revolver that was taken from the hand of Wolfe was turned over to the East Liverpool police department, and later given to Prosecuting Attorney J. C. Hanley, and is "Exhibit A" in the trial. Exhibits "B, C, D. E. and F" are two empty shells and three '38 calibre shells.'

Cross-Examination of Smith.

Under cross-examination, Smith testified that he had known Wolfe for about nine months and that he had seen him off and on every night since January last.

"What would you say about him having a well balanced mind?" Mr. [illegible]ans asked under cross-examination.

"[illegible]e's not brilliant—he switches from one subject to another. He told me he wanted to get on the police force, and he declared that he had done police work in Pomeroy, but I never took his statements seriously."

"Who are the Anthony's Wolfe had trouble with?" asked Mr. Hanley.

"They are a notorious bunch of outlaws: we ran them out of there, and they are in Wellsville now," the witness replied.

Dane Grafton is Witness.

As a witness for the state, Dane Grafton, of St. George street, East End, employed as a turner by the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles Co., testified that he saw Patrolman Smith take the revolver from the hand of Wolfe, and that he saw Mrs. Dearth lying on the floor of her restaurant, dead, with her face covered with blood, and that blood also covered the face of Wolfe.

"Smith broke the gun in my presence," testified Campbell Brown, of East End, who entered the restaurant after the shooting. "I saw a hole in the head of Mrs. Dearth, and she was dead. I then called the ambulance. When I asked Wolfe who had shot Mrs. Dearth, he replied that "he didn't know.'"

Mr. Brown was not crossexamined.

Wolfe Worked About Restaurant.

That Wolfe did work about the Dearth restaurant—at times mopping up, was testified to by Mrs. Leona Swigert, a sister-in-law of Mrs. Dearth. "I've seen Wolfe with revolvers many times," the witness said under direct examination." He pointed a gun at me once, but I believe it was only in fun."

She testified that Wolfe often took money from the cash register, and that Wolfe flew into a fit of temper after George Beaver told him that he had lost $5.00.

Mrs. Swigert then told of receiving a letter from Mrs. Dearth that the latter had written to Wolfe, telling him to leave town, and that the letter was unsigned. Mrs. Dearth got this letter from Wolfe in some manner, and after giving it to her sister said. "I'm sorry I wrote it," the witness testified. Mrs. Swigert took the letter home with her and burned it, she declared.

Victim's Brother Testifies

Bayard Swigert, a brother of Mrs. Dearth, followed his wife on the stand and declared that he had known Wolfe since he went to board at the Dearth restaurant two years ago.

"Ever see Wolfe with a gun?" asked Mr. Hanley.

"He was great on swapping guns," the witness replied. "Mrs. Dearth told me she wrote a blackhand letter to 'Billy' and he turned it over to the police. She told me she wrote the letter because she wanted him to leave town, and that she had told Wolfe to 'pack his clothes and move.'

"George Beaver told me that Wolfe said that he would kill him (Beaver) if he accused Wolfe of taking $5."

Capt. Conley Identifies Revolver.

Considerable of the testimony offered at the insanity trial of Wolfe was then read into the record and affirmed by the witness.

Capt. Mason Conley, of the East Liverpool police department, identified the revolver exhibited by the state as the weapon taken from Wolfe by Patrolman Chester Smith and turned over to his department. He also described the bullet wound in the face of Wolfe and of visiting Wolfe at the hospital.

"I always told people Wolfe was insane," John Fimple declared on the witness stand when questioned on direct examination by Attorney Walter W. Beck. Fimple then described a fight Wolfe had previously with William Kennedy.

Kennedy Tells of Fight.

William Kennedy, under examination by Attorney Grosshans, told of a fight he and Wolfe had and of Wolfe striking at him.

"What was the fight about?"

"There was no trouble that I know of," the witness replied.

Charles Petit testified Wolfe, at one time, took a gun from a shelf and pushed it against his side. "I judged him as not being all there," he said looking at Wolfe, in answer to Mr. Beck's question.

George Staple, colored, for four years employed as a cart driver for the American Vitrified Products company in East Liverpool, told of Wolfe threatening to stab him with a knife and of Wolfe also having a gun in his hip pocket.

SAN CARLO CO. HERE JAN. 15

"Madame Butterfly" Will be Presented at Ceramic Theatre.

Grand opera lovers in East Liverpool are looking forward eagerly to the coming visit of the San Carlo Grand Opera company to the Ceramic theatre, Thursday evening, January 15, when Fortune Gallo will present his organization in a performance of "Madame Butterfly."

The success of the San Carlo company this season has been phenomenal. Entering upon its ninth annual engagement in New York, this company opened the new Jolson theatre, playing four weeks to capacity houses. This engagement was followed by two-weeks visits to Boston and Philadelphia, after which the coast-to-coast tour follows, when nearly every city in the country will be visited.

Conspicuous among the artists who will sing in East Liverpool is Miss Elda Vettori. Miss Vettori has often been called the most beautiful woman on the operatic stage. And to personal beauty she adds a voice of great beauty and of the true dramatic timbre. Also she is a singing actress of the highest order—a singer who acts as well as she sings.

Many old favorites, greatly esteemed by local music lovers, will be heard, as well as several new singers. Never before has this producer presented so many brilliant stars in one season, and never such a well organized chorus or thoroughly trained orchestra. East Liverpool can look forward confidently to one of its most resplendent operatic events, for the San Carlo Grand Opera company this year overwhelmingly surpasses and breaks all past records.

There is no other company in the country that has a higher general personnel. It is the only permanently organized grand opera company touring in America today.

This difference was adjusted before they got home and both were cheerful. They sat and talked until almost 2 a. m., when they went out for a bite to eat. When they returned, at 2:30 a. m., Mrs. Stotheart went to her bedroom and he to his piano.

ready seriously burned, and his strength weakened by hanging to the window sill, he had climbed only a few feet when his grasp on the rope loosened and he plunged to the ground. He was killed.

Dies Seeking Insurance Policy.

The body was partly indentified as that of a man whose name was Russell. His sister, Mrs. Anne Nugent, and her three children, Barbara, 78; Antoninette, 22, and Fred, 16, made their way to the ground down a fire escape. Mrs. Nugent and her son were slightly burned.

Mrs. McShane, believed to be one of the dead women, would be alive, her husband said, had she not gone back to get fire insurance papers which were in their rooms. McShane said he, his wife and their two children, Florence and William, 12, and 17, fled in their nightclothes to the fire escape. Once outside and with safety at hand, McShane said that his wife suddenly remembered that insurance policies covering their furniture were in a tin box in their room.

For a time there was a near panic among patients in the Mount Sinai hospital nearby. Nurses and internes went from room to room, assuring patients that there was no danger and pulling down window shades so that the patients could not see the fire.

ment that the citizen render personal service to the family, tribe or organization of which he was a member. With the decline of warfare and standing armies and the development of private capital, service was replaced by a payment of money.

"In mediaeval times the lords levied taxes under the name of rents. The only ones who paid were those who were too weak to resist. Thus to pay taxes other than by service was degrading. The Mohammedan theory was that only faithful Moslems should be allowed to render personal service to the state—that conquered Jews and Christians unworthy of that service should pay money taxes.

"There are two schools of thought which must be considered in looking to the future.

"First—There are those who believe that the primary function of taxation is to bring fortunes down to a common level, or, as has been stated, to equalize wealth; that the revenue end of taxation is secondary.

"Second—There are those who believe that tax laws should be considered only from the point of revenue. That they should not be concerned with remedying inequalities of wealth or used for bringing about social reforms. They believe such reforms should be left to separate and distinct legislation.

"If our lawmaking bodies in the future are to use taxes for purposes other than raising necessary revenues, we will have one kind of tax laws in the future. If we are to judge the future by the past, we have a rather unpleasant picture.

"The federal government has been reaching out into new fields of activity, has been taking on new obligations, such as the soldiers' bonus, road building, etc., and this, together with the so-called socialistic doctrine held by many of our lawmakers, that the purpose of the surtax, inheritance tax, and gift tax is to equalize wealth, has resulted in higher taxes than Secretary Mellon believes is necessary.

"Taking the total federal and state taxes the average citizen and business is compelled to pay, we can, judging solely from the past, see no relief in the future.

"It is possible under our present system of estate taxes for the estate of a man holding property in many States to be assessed a total tax of more than 100 per cent.

"An apt illustration of the present situation is to picture each State as a guest around a banquet table, each armed with a sharp tonged fork and Uncle Sam at the head of the table likewise armed. A platter heaped with food labeled "Estates of Decendents" is set down in the center of the table and every fork jabbed into it. The only part that the late jabber gets is two or three forks through his wrist.

"The State of Pennsylvania is also studying the tax question. The optimists among those who take an interest in tax problems are hoping for something tangible, while the pessimists are still in the majority."

Alleged Slayer

"What are you being tried for now?"

Invested in Restaurant.

Mr. Hanley then led the witness up to his going to the Dearth restaurant to live. Wolfe said that during the illness of Mrs. Dearth he looked after her and that she cared for him when he was sick. He also told of turning all his money over to Mrs. Dearth to put in the restaurant business under a sort of partnership arrangement. Wolfe testified that Mrs. Dearth was to give him a half interest in the business and the real estate.

"We were just friends," the witness declared.

Wolfe testified that he had several fights, but that he was never in a shooting scrape. He also said that he knew Mrs. Dearth never wrote him the letter which was testified about Monday.

He admitted, however, of talking about leaving the Dearth place, but Mrs. Dearth said to him that he should remain there.

"She begged me to stay," Wolfe said.

"She and the old man also wanted me there," the witness asserted.

Testimony showed that Wolfe gave Mrs. Dearth money the week before she was killed.

"Mrs. Dearth was an honest woman, that's why I gave her the money. She said she would make it right later on," he declared.

Pomeroy Friend is Witness

Columbus O. Hutton, 62, native of Pomeroy, testified that he knew Wolfe since he was a baby. Hutton came to East Liverpool two years ago. With his son and Wolfe, the defendant, he "batched" in one of the houses of the American Vitrified Co., East End, East Liverpool.

Hutton said that "a girl got around Arthur and he bought her a wrist watch, but I told him if he had any money to spend he should send it to his parents."

Hutton said that Wolfe had a revolver and penknife and that he bought them from the husband of Mrs. Dearth.

"I had trouble with Wolfe about his foolishness," Hutton declared. "At times he would cry. I knew of him drawing a knife on a fellow in East End and I always looked upon Arthur as a boy of weak mind."

Hutton testified that an uncle of the defendant had died in an asylum at Spencer, W. Va. He also said that he knew that Wolfe had never been in Kentucky, Columbus or Delaware working.

Uncle Died in Asylum.

S. H. Wolfe, 68, of Letart township, Meigs county, an uncle of the defendant, took the stand and told of his brother dying in the West Virginia asylum and that members of the family were weak mentally. The witness testified that Wolfe was never away from home more than two weeks at a time until he came to East Liverpool and that he had been working on farms near his home. He told of the prisoner being expelled from school and also of Wolfe striking him with an ax, breaking two of his ribs, when the witness wanted the defendant to assist in splitting some wood at their own home.

"I don't think his mind was ever developed," the elder Wolfe declared.

Mrs. Edna Carrollton, wife of Probate Judge Carrollton of Meigs county, a former school teacher, was called by the defense and testified that the defendant had been expelled from school and that he was considered feeble minded. Mrs. Carrollton was not cross-examined.

Mother is Called.

With her eyes closed, Mrs. Bertha Wolfe, aged 44, mother of the defendant, stood with upraised hands as she swore to tell the truth, just before entering the witness stand.

Mrs. Wolfe testified that she was the mother of 10 children and that she was one of a family of 10 children. She related that one of her daughters was married, lives near Delaware, O., and that another is married and lives in Kentucky.

Mrs. Wolfe, under direct examination by Attorney Grosshans, said that the defendant left home two years ago by boat for East Liverpool and that he never worked in Kentucky, nor Delaware, nor Columbus, "that I know of." She said Wolfe went to school until he was in the fourth reader and that he "left school because his mind was not inclined that way." She went on to relate that when she gave him advice that he would become angry. At other times he would go into the woods.

Dr. J. W. Chetwynd and Dr. C. H. Bailey, of East Liverpool, Dr. Seward Harris, of Lisbon, and Dr. Hyde, of Massillon, called by the defense are expected to testify this afternoon.

Wolfe's Life History.

The prisoner began his testimony in his own behalf at 4 p. m. yesterday.

Attorney Grosshans, under direct examination, brought out the story of Wolfe's early life. It has been six years since Wolfe has been back to the scene of his birth, three miles from Letart Falls, Meigs county.

"There were four children at home when I left and two were away from home then," Wolfe went on to relate. "There were Alice, Dennis, Dary and Kent down home, but Mary and Marjury were married. I went to work at common labor at Greenup, and left there for Columbus, O., where I worked on the railroad for several months, boarding near the station. Then I went to Delaware—'six miles' from Columbus and got a job on a farm, and four years ago I went to East Liverpool.

Story of Shooting.

Wolfe testified that he carried knives and guns with him, "but only when he was tradin' 'em."

"Now William, how did you get shot?" queried Mr. Grosshans.

"I don't know," he responded quickly.

"What time was it?"

Somewhere between 8 and 9 o'clock.

"Did you ever have any trouble with [illegible]?"

"William Kennedy called me a stool pigeon several weeks before the shooting, but there was no one present when Kennedy and I had the trouble. After I hit Kennedy, he ran away to get 'Red' King and his bunch. Then George Beaver came into the restaurant one night and ordered a sandwich and a cup of coffee, and I gave him change from a $1 bill. He accused me of short changing him."

"Did you have a gun then?,' Wolfe was asked.

"There was one lying on the shelf".

"When did you know you was shot?"

"Anybody ever make any threats against you?"

"Yes, lots of them, but they didn't scare me."

Woman Testifies For State.

The state scored heavily during the afternoon session, when Mrs. Anna Johnson, residing at 1070 Pennsylvania avenue, East End, East Liverpool, who is employed as a ware brusher at the No. 2 plant of the Homer Laughlin China Co., testified she looked in the window of the restaurant of Mrs. Flora Dearth between the time of the first and second shots fired there the night of Oct. 3, last.

"When I passed the restaurant that night a man stood inside the room with his back toward me, and I saw a man or woman facing me, throw up their hands and fall to the floor," related Mrs. Johnston. I looked in the window again and then heard another shot and I saw the man fall. The two people were only a short distance from each other and I saw the fire and the smoke from the shots. Wolfe fell after the second shot. I did not see any other people in the room at the time of the shooting.

"I hastened my step down Mulberry street and met some boys, and to them I related what I had seen. They ran back toward the restaurant, but by that time a crowd had gathered but I continued on my way home. It so happened that in my passing the restaurant I saw both people fall."

"Did you go in the restaurant?" asked Mr. Hanley.

"No, indeed, I didn't," the witness replied.

"You didn't see Wolfe shoot, did you? asked Mr. Beck.

"No, but I saw fire and smoke from both shots."

"You didn't see a gun in the hands of either?"

"No, sir."

Chester Smith on Stand.

A death-like stillness crept over the crowded court room when Patrolman Chester Smith the first to reach Mrs. Dearth and Wolfe after the shooting described the scene.

"She was dead—lifeless and with blood covering her face," he said. "Wolfe was lying partly on his right side, with his left arm under his right side, and with a gun in his hand. "I grasped his hand with the gun, broke the gun, and took from the barrel two empty cartridge shells and three loaded shells. I smelled the gun and then knew that it had been fired. There was a powder burn on the left cheek of Wolfe. There was a bullet hole in the plaster.

"I asked Wolfe what he had done the shooting for and he replied, 'I didn't do it.'

"Who did the shooting. I again asked him and he replied this time that 'George Beaver did it.' I then asked him what it was all about and he came back with the statement that 'it was over the dishes.'

Mr. Smith then told of calling assistance and of the removal of Wolfe to the East Liverpool hospital, and the summoning of an undertaker.

The revolver that was taken from the hand of Wolfe was turned over to the East Liverpool police department, and later given to Prosecuting Attorney J. C. Hanley, and is "Exhibit A" in the trial. Exhibits "B, C, D. E. and F" are two empty shells and three '38 calibre shells.'

Cross-Examination of Smith.

Under cross-examination, Smith testified that he had known Wolfe for about nine months and that he had seen him off and on every night since January last.

"What would you say about him having a well balanced mind?" Mr. [illegible] asked under cross-examination.

"He's not brilliant—he switches from one subject to another. He told me he wanted to get on the police force, and he declared that he had done police work in Pomeroy, but I never took his statements seriously."

"Who are the Anthony's Wolfe had trouble with?" asked Mr. Hanley.

"They are a notorious bunch of outlaws: we ran them out of there, and they are in Wellsville now," the witness replied.

Dane Grafton is Witness.

As a witness for the state, Dane Grafton, of St. George street, East End, employed as a turner by the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles Co., testified that he saw Patrolman Smith take the revolver from the hand of Wolfe, and that he saw Mrs. Dearth lying on the floor of her restaurant, dead, with her face covered with blood, and that blood also covered the face of Wolfe.

"Smith broke the gun in my presence," testified Campbell Brown, of East End, who entered the restaurant after the shooting. "I saw a hole in the head of Mrs. Dearth, and she was dead. I then called the ambulance. When I asked Wolfe who had shot Mrs. Dearth, he replied that "he didn't know.'"

Mr. Brown was not crossexamined.

Wolfe Worked About Restaurant.

That Wolfe did work about the Dearth restaurant—at times mopping up, was testified to by Mrs. Leona Swigert, a sister-in-law of Mrs. Dearth. "I've seen Wolfe with revolvers many times," the witness said under direct examination." He pointed a gun at me once, but I believe it was only in fun."

She testified that Wolfe often took money from the cash register, and that Wolfe flew into a fit of temper after George Beaver told him that he had lost $5.00.

Mrs. Swigert then told of receiving a letter from Mrs. Dearth that the latter had written to Wolfe, telling him to leave town, and that the letter was unsigned. Mrs. Dearth got this letter from Wolfe in some manner, and after giving it to her sister said. "I'm sorry I wrote it," the witness testified. Mrs. Swigert took the letter home with her and burned it, she declared.

Victim's Brother Testifies

Bayard Swigert, a brother of Mrs. Dearth, followed his wife on the stand and declared that he had known Wolfe since he went to board at the Dearth restaurant two years ago.

"Ever see Wolfe with a gun?" asked Mr. Hanley.

"He was great on swapping guns," the witness replied. "Mrs. Dearth told me she wrote a blackhand letter to 'Billy' and he turned it over to the police. She told me she wrote the letter because she wanted him to leave town, and that she had told Wolfe to 'pack his clothes and move.'

"George Beaver told me that Wolfe said that he would kill him (Beaver) if he accused Wolfe of taking $5."

Capt. Conley Identifies Revolver.

Considerable of the testimony offered at the insanity trial of Wolfe was then read into the record and affirmed by the witness.

Capt. Mason Conley, of the East Liverpool police department, identified the revolver exhibited by the state as the weapon taken from Wolfe by Patrolman Chester Smith and turned over to his department. He also described the bullet wound in the face of Wolfe and of visiting Wolfe at the hospital.

"I always told people Wolfe was insane," John Fimple declared on the witness stand when questioned on direct examination by Attorney Walter W. Beck. Fimple then described a fight Wolfe had previously with William Kennedy.

Kennedy Tells of Fight.

William Kennedy, under examination by Attorney Grosshans, told of a fight he and Wolfe had and of Wolfe striking at him.

"What was the fight about?"

"There was no trouble that I know of," the witness replied.

Charles Petit testified Wolfe, at one time, took a gun from a shelf and pushed it against his side. "I judged him as not being all there," he said looking at Wolfe, in answer to Mr. Beck's question.

George Staple, colored, for four years employed as a cart driver for the American Vitrified Products company in East Liverpool, told of Wolfe threatening to stab him with a knife and of Wolfe also having a gun in his hip pocket.

SAN CARLO CO. HERE JAN. 15

"Madame Butterfly" Will be Presented at Ceramic Theatre.

Grand opera lovers in East Liverpool are looking forward eagerly to the coming visit of the San Carlo Grand Opera company to the Ceramic theatre, Thursday evening, January 15, when Fortune Gallo will present his organization in a performance of "Madame Butterfly."

The success of the San Carlo company this season has been phenomenal. Entering upon its ninth annual engagement in New York, this company opened the new Jolson theatre, playing four weeks to capacity houses. This engagement was followed by two-weeks visits to Boston and Philadelphia, after which the coast-to-coast tour follows, when nearly every city in the country will be visited.

Conspicuous among the artists who will sing in East Liverpool is Miss Elda Vettori. Miss Vettori has often been called the most beautiful woman on the operatic stage. And to personal beauty she adds a voice of great beauty and of the true dramatic timbre. Also she is a singing actress of the highest order—a singer who acts as well as she sings.

Many old favorites, greatly esteemed by local music lovers, will be heard, as well as several new singers. Never before has this producer presented so many brilliant stars in one season, and never such a well organized chorus or thoroughly trained orchestra. East Liverpool can look forward confidently to one of its most resplendent operatic events, for the San Carlo Grand Opera company this year overwhelmingly surpasses and breaks all past records.

There is no other company in the country that has a higher general personnel. It is the only permanently organized grand opera company touring in America today.

This difference was adjusted before they got home and both were cheerful. They sat and talked until almost 2 a. m., when they went out for a bite to eat. When they returned, at 2:30 a. m., Mrs. Stotheart went to her bedroom and he to his piano.

At his request, she brought him a pen, that he might jot down the combinations of notes as he played them. She quietly returned to the bedroom. The she came back to the living room.

An autopsy will be held immediately. Police could find no trace of a poison in the apartment. The aunt said she had found crystals in a glass of water in the kitchen but had thought nothing of it, and allowed them to be washed down the sink.

As a consequence, Claudia Muzio's entire childhood was spent watching and hearing the great singers in rehearsal as well as in public performance. Until she was 16, the harp and the piano were her only mediums of musical expression but when it was found that she had a remarkable voice.

At this time, she returned to Italy where she studied under some of the most famous teachers of the land. Her progress was rapid and not long afterwards she made her debut in Milan then sang in London. Reports of her success in these places led to her engagement with the Metropolitan, where she scored her initial triumph in "Tosca."

ment that the citizen render personal service to the family, tribe or organization of which he was a member. With the decline of warfare and standing armies and the development of private capital, service was replaced by a payment of money.

"In mediaeval times the lords levied taxes under the name of rents. The only ones who paid were those who were too weak to resist. Thus to pay taxes other than by service was degrading. The Mohammedan theory was that only faithful Moslems should be allowed to render personal service to the state—that conquered Jews and Christians unworthy of that service should pay money taxes.

"There are two schools of thought which must be considered in looking to the future.

"First—There are those who believe that the primary function of taxation is to bring fortunes down to a common level, or, as has been stated, to equalize wealth; that the revenue end of taxation is secondary.

"Second—There are those who believe that tax laws should be considered only from the point of revenue. That they should not be concerned with remedying inequalities of wealth or used for bringing about social reforms. They believe such reforms should be left to separate and distinct legislation.

"If our lawmaking bodies in the future are to use taxes for purposes other than raising necessary revenues, we will have one kind of tax laws in the future. If we are to judge the future by the past, we have a rather unpleasant picture.

"The federal government has been reaching out into new fields of activity, has been taking on new obligations, such as the soldiers' bonus, road building, etc., and this, together with the so-called socialistic doctrine held by many of our lawmakers, that the purpose of the surtax, inheritance tax, and gift tax is to equalize wealth, has resulted in higher taxes than Secretary Mellon believes is necessary.

"Taking the total federal and state taxes the average citizen and business is compelled to pay, we can, judging solely from the past, see no relief in the future.

"It is possible under our present system of estate taxes for the estate of a man holding property in many States to be assessed a total tax of more than 100 per cent.

"An apt illustration of the present situation is to picture each State as a guest around a banquet table, each armed with a sharp tonged fork and Uncle Sam at the head of the table likewise armed. A platter heaped with food labeled "Estates of Decendents" is set down in the center of the table and every fork jabbed into it. The only part that the late jabber gets is two or three forks through his wrist.

"The State of Pennsylvania is also studying the tax question. The optimists among those who take an interest in tax problems are hoping for something tangible, while the pessimists are still in the majority."

Alleged Slayer

"What are you being tried for now?"

Invested in Restaurant.

Mr. Hanley then led the witness up to his going to the Dearth restaurant to live. Wolfe said that during the illness of Mrs. Dearth he looked after her and that she cared for him when he was sick. He also told of turning all his money over to Mrs. Dearth to put in the restaurant business under a sort of partnership arrangement. Wolfe testified that Mrs. Dearth was to give him a half interest in the business and the real estate.

"We were just friends," the witness declared.

Wolfe testified that he had several fights, but that he was never in a shooting scrape. He also said that he knew Mrs. Dearth never wrote him the letter which was testified about Monday.

He admitted, however, of talking about leaving the Dearth place, but Mrs. Dearth said to him that he should remain there.

"She begged me to stay," Wolfe said.

"She and the old man also wanted me there," the witness asserted.

Testimony showed that Wolfe gave Mrs. Dearth money the week before she was killed.

"Mrs. Dearth was an honest woman, that's why I gave her the money. She said she would make it right later on," he declared.

Pomeroy Friend is Witness

Columbus O. Hutton, 62, native of Pomeroy, testified that he knew Wolfe since he was a baby. Hutton came to East Liverpool two years ago. With his son and Wolfe, the defendant, he "batched" in one of the houses of the American Vitrified Co., East End, East Liverpool.

Hutton said that "a girl got around Arthur and he bought her a wrist watch, but I told him if he had any money to spend he should send it to his parents."

Hutton said that Wolfe had a revolver and penknife and that he bought them from the husband of Mrs. Dearth.

"I had trouble with Wolfe about his foolishness," Hutton declared. "At times he would cry. I knew of him drawing a knife on a fellow in East End and I always looked upon Arthur as a boy of weak mind."

Hutton testified that an uncle of the defendant had died in an asylum at Spencer, W. Va. He also said that he knew that Wolfe had never been in Kentucky, Columbus or Delaware working.

Uncle Died in Asylum.

S. H. Wolfe, 68, of Letart township, Meigs county, an uncle of the defendant, took the stand and told of his brother dying in the West Virginia asylum and that members of the family were weak mentally. The witness testified that Wolfe was never away from home more than two weeks at a time until he came to East Liverpool and that he had been working on farms near his home. He told of the prisoner being expelled from school and also of Wolfe striking him with an ax, breaking two of his ribs, when the witness wanted the defendant to assist in splitting some wood at their own home.

"I don't think his mind was ever developed," the elder Wolfe declared.

Mrs. Edna Carrollton, wife of Probate Judge Carrollton of Meigs county, a former school teacher, was called by the defense and testified that the defendant had been expelled from school and that he was considered feeble minded. Mrs. Carrollton was not cross-examined.

Mother is Called.

With her eyes closed, Mrs. Bertha Wolfe, aged 44, mother of the defendant, stood with upraised hands as she swore to tell the truth, just before entering the witness stand.

Mrs. Wolfe testified that she was the mother of 10 children and that she was one of a family of 10 children. She related that one of her daughters was married, lives near Delaware, O., and that another is married and lives in Kentucky.

Mrs. Wolfe, under direct examination by Attorney Grosshans, said that the defendant left home two years ago by boat for East Liverpool and that he never worked in Kentucky, nor Delaware, nor Columbus, "that I know of." She said Wolfe went to school until he was in the fourth reader and that he "left school because his mind was not inclined that way." She went on to relate that when she gave him advice that he would become angry. At other times he would go into the woods.

Dr. J. W. Chetwynd and Dr. C. H. Bailey, of East Liverpool, Dr. Seward Harris, of Lisbon, and Dr. Hyde, of Massillon, called by the defense are expected to testify this afternoon.

Wolfe's Life History.

The prisoner began his testimony in his own behalf at 4 p. m. yesterday.

Attorney Grosshans, under direct examination, brought out the story of Wolfe's early life. It has been six years since Wolfe has been back to the scene of his birth, three miles from Letart Falls, Meigs county.

"There were four children at home when I left and two were away from home then," Wolfe went on to relate. "There were Alice, Dennis, Dary and Kent down home, but Mary and Marjury were married. I went to work at common labor at Greenup, and left there for Columbus, O., where I worked on the railroad for several months, boarding near the station. Then I went to Delaware—'six miles' from Columbus and got a job on a farm, and four years ago I went to East Liverpool.

Story of Shooting.

Wolfe said he carried knives and guns with him, "but only when he was tradin' 'em."

"Now William, how did you get shot?" queried Mr. Grosshans.

"I don't know," he responded quickly.

"What time was it?"

Somewhere between 8 and 9 o'clock.

"Did you ever have any trouble with him?"

"William Kennedy called me a stool pigeon several weeks before the shooting, but there was no one present when Kennedy and I had the trouble. After I hit Kennedy, he ran away to get 'Red' King and his bunch. Then George Beaver came into the restaurant one night and ordered a sandwich and a cup of coffee, and I gave him change from a $1 bill. He accused me of short changing him."

"Did you have a gun then?,' Wolfe was asked.

"There was one lying on the shelf".

"When did you know you was shot?"

"Anybody ever make any threats against you?"

"Yes, lots of them, but they didn't scare me."

Woman Testifies For State.

The state scored heavily during the afternoon session, when Mrs. Anna Johnson, residing at 1070 Pennsylvania avenue, East End, East Liverpool, who is employed as a ware brusher at the No. 2 plant of the Homer Laughlin China Co., testified she looked in the window of the restaurant of Mrs. Flora Dearth between the time of the first and second shots fired there the night of Oct. 3, last.

"When I passed the restaurant that night a man stood inside the room with his back toward me, and I saw a man or woman facing me, throw up their hands and fall to the floor," related Mrs. Johnston. I looked in the window again and then heard another shot and I saw the man fall. The two people were only a short distance from each other and I saw the fire and the smoke from the shots. Wolfe fell after the second shot. I did not see any other people in the room at the time of the shooting.

"I hastened my step down Mulberry street and met some boys, and to them I related what I had seen. They ran back toward the restaurant, but by that time a crowd had gathered but I continued on my way home. It so happened that in my passing the restaurant I saw both people fall."

"Did you go in the restaurant?" asked Mr. Hanley.

"No, indeed, I didn't," the witness replied.

"You didn't see Wolfe shoot, did you? asked Mr. Beck.

"No, but I saw fire and smoke from both shots."

"You didn't see a gun in the hands of either?"

"No, sir."

Chester Smith on Stand.

A death-like stillness crept over the crowded court room when Patrolman Chester Smith the first to reach Mrs. Dearth and Wolfe after the shooting described the scene.

"She was dead—lifeless and with blood covering her face," he said. "Wolfe was lying partly on his right side, with his left arm under his right side, and with a gun in his hand. "I grasped his hand with the gun, broke the gun, and took from the barrel two empty cartridge shells and three loaded shells. I smelled the gun and then knew that it had been fired. There was a powder burn on the left cheek of Wolfe. There was a bullet hole in the plaster.

"I asked Wolfe what he had done the shooting for and he replied, 'I didn't do it.'

"Who did the shooting. I again asked him and he replied this time that 'George Beaver did it.' I then asked him what it was all about and he came back with the statement that 'it was over the dishes.'

Mr. Smith then told of calling assistance and of the removal of Wolfe to the East Liverpool hospital, and the summoning of an undertaker.

The revolver that was taken from the hand of Wolfe was turned over to the East Liverpool police department, and later given to Prosecuting Attorney J. C. Hanley, and is "Exhibit A" in the trial. Exhibits "B, C, D, E, and F" are two empty shells and three '38 calibre shells.'

Cross-Examination of Smith.

Under cross-examination, Smith testified that he had known Wolfe for about nine months and that he had seen him off and on every night since January last.

"What would you say about him having a well balanced mind?" Mr. Evans asked under cross-examination.

"He's not brilliant—he switches from one subject to another. He told me he wanted to get on the police force, and he declared that he had done police work in Pomeroy, but I never took his statements seriously."

"Who are the Anthony's Wolfe had trouble with?" asked Mr. Hanley.

"They are a notorious bunch of outlaws: we ran them out of there, and they are in Wellsville now," the witness replied.

Dane Grafton is Witness.

As a witness for the state, Dane Grafton, of St. George street, East End, employed as a turner by the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles Co., testified that he saw Patrolman Smith take the revolver from the hand of Wolfe, and that he saw Mrs. Dearth lying on the floor of her restaurant, dead, with her face covered with blood, and that blood also covered the face of Wolfe.

"Smith broke the gun in my presence," testified Campbell Brown, of East End, who entered the restaurant after the shooting. "I saw a hole in the head of Mrs. Dearth, and she was dead. I then called the ambulance. When I asked Wolfe who had shot Mrs. Dearth, he replied that "he didn't know.'"

Mr. Brown was not crossexamined.

Wolfe Worked About Restaurant.

That Wolfe did work about the Dearth restaurant—at times mopping up, was testified to by Mrs. Leona Swigert, a sister-in-law of Mrs. Dearth. "I've seen Wolfe with revolvers many times," the witness said under direct examination." He pointed a gun at me once, but I believe it was only in fun."

She testified that Wolfe often took money from the cash register, and that Wolfe flew into a fit of temper after George Beaver told him that he had lost $5.00.

Mrs. Swigert then told of receiving a letter from Mrs. Dearth that the latter had written to Wolfe, telling him to leave town, and that the letter was unsigned. Mrs. Dearth got this letter from Wolfe in some manner, and after giving it to her sister said. "I'm sorry I wrote it," the witness testified. Mrs. Swigert took the letter home with her and burned it, she declared.

Victim's Brother Testifies

Bayard Swigert, a brother of Mrs. Dearth, followed his wife on the stand and declared that he had known Wolfe since he went to board at the Dearth restaurant two years ago.

"Ever see Wolfe with a gun?" asked Mr. Hanley.

"He was great on swapping guns," the witness replied. "Mrs. Dearth told me she wrote a blackhand letter to 'Billy' and he turned it over to the police. She told me she wrote the letter because she wanted him to leave town, and that she had told Wolfe to 'pack his clothes and move.'

"George Beaver told me that Wolfe said that he would kill him (Beaver) if he accused Wolfe of taking $5."

Capt. Conley Identifies Revolver.

Considerable of the testimony offered at the insanity trial of Wolfe was then read into the record and affirmed by the witness.

Capt. Mason Conley, of the East Liverpool police department, identified the revolver exhibited by the state as the weapon taken from Wolfe by Patrolman Chester Smith and turned over to his department. He also described the bullet wound in the face of Wolfe and of visiting Wolfe at the hospital.

"I always told people Wolfe was insane," John Fimple declared on the witness stand when questioned on direct examination by Attorney Walter W. Beck. Fimple then described a fight Wolfe had previously with William Kennedy.

Kennedy Tells of Fight.

William Kennedy, under examination by Attorney Grosshans, told of a fight he and Wolfe had and of Wolfe striking at him.

"What was the fight about?"

"There was no trouble that I know of," the witness replied.

Charles Petit testified Wolfe, at one time, took a gun from a shelf and pushed it against his side. "I judged him as not being all there," he said looking at Wolfe, in answer to Mr. Beck's question.

George Staple, colored, for four years employed as a cart driver for the American Vitrified Products company in East Liverpool, told of Wolfe threatening to stab him with a knife and of Wolfe also having a gun in his hip pocket.

REFUSE TO PAY FULL CLAIMS

Insurance Firms Offer Compromise in Prezzia Fire Case.

Leave to file an amended petition has been granted by Judge James G. Moore in five cases entered in common pleas court by Charles Prezzia, of Wellsville against insurance companies which have refused to pay loss and damage claims following an explosion and fire at Prezzia's former place of business in Twelfth street.

The defense has set up the claim that the provisions of the several policies did not cover explosions, although the store was destroyed by fire following an explosion.

It has been pointed out that the several insurance companies have offered a compromise adjustment, but this has been refused by the plaintiff, who is represented by Attorney James E. O'Grady of Wellsville.

Attorney Charles S. Speaker of Lisbon is co-counsel for the law firm representing the five insurance companies. Leave to file amended petitions in all of these cases has been granted until January 3 next.

TORONTO POLICE RAID ROADHOUSE

Twenty-five men and women, many of them prominent Steubenville residents, it is reported, were caught in a raid on a roadhouse on the old Cable farm, north of Steubenville, Sunday night by the entire Toronto police force.

Mayor Thomas H. Montgomery, of Toronto, is credited with having initiated the drive, the Toronto mayor declaring that too many Toronto homes were being broken up because of young husband's, and on some cases, young wives, spending too much of their time at the resort, and although he asserted he is not operating a "kangaroo" court, sent his force eight miles away from home to clean out the nest.

Donald Smith, Steubenville, was arrested as the proprietor, although the roadhouse is said to belong to Steubenville liquor interests. Smith was released on $2,000 bond for trial Wednesday on a charge of possessing and selling liquor. Just as the raiders were leaving, Jack Lippert, Steubenville, drove up to the resort with an automobile full of beer. He was also held under $2,000 bond for hearing Wednesday.

A number of slot machines were found in the place and when a man giving his name as Edward L. Moore, Steubenville, told Mayor Montgomery he owned the money-vending machines and wanted them turned over to him, he was promptly placed under arrest and held for hearing under $500 bond.

The raid was put over when the nightly program was at its height, and as the uniformed officers entered there was a shout, "Don't give your right names." The guests were greatly relieved to learn that only the proprietor was to be arrested and the paraphernalia destroyed. A man giving his name as Harry Smith was arrested when he resisted officers when they started a search for liquor. He gave bond for appearance at a hearing later.

"Cold" Light Not Practical.

"Cold" light from the practical standpoint of illumination will not likely become a commercial utility, according to Elliott Q. Adams of the Nela Research Laboratory of Cleveland. The glow from phosphorous and the light of the firefly, he said, are most inefficient as light. Light may be spoken of as "cold" only when it is emitted by a source of low temperature and when the proportion of non-luminous radiation is small which is true with the firefly in both instances, but this he says does not mean that the luminous efficiency is high. Most sources of light are at very high temperatures.

Poland Building New Port.

Soon the name of Port Gyndnia will become familiar in maritime commerce. It is being built by the Polish government a few miles from Danzig. The place has been a fishing hamlet for centuries and it is being entirely converted to modern commerce as a harbor town. Many steamers cannot stop at Danzig because of political difficulties and they are already using Gydnia.

Street accident cases are being admitted to West London Hospitals at the rate of one every two hours, night and day throughout the year.

Insurance Firms Offer Compromise in Prezzia Fire Case.

Leave to file an amended petition has been granted by Judge James G. Moore in five cases entered in common pleas court by Charles Prezzia, of Wellsville against insurance companies which have refused to pay loss and damage claims following an explosion and fire at Prezzia's former place of business in Twelfth street.

The defense has set up the claim that the provisions of the several policies did not cover explosions, although the store was destroyed by fire following an explosion.

It has been pointed out that the several insurance companies have offered a compromise adjustment, but this has been refused by the plaintiff, who is represented by Attorney James S. O'Grady of Wellsville.

Attorney Charles S. Speaker of Lisbon is co-counsel for the law firm representing the five insurance companies. Leave to file amended petitions in all of these cases has been granted until January 3 next.

TORONTO POLICE RAID ROADHOUSE

Twenty-five men and women, many of them prominent Steubenville residents, it is reported, were caught in a raid on a roadhouse on the old Cable farm, north of Steubenville, Sunday night by the entire Toronto police force.

Mayor Thomas H. Montgomery, of Toronto, is credited with having initiated the drive, the Toronto mayor declaring that too many Toronto homes were being broken up because of young husband's, and on some cases, young wives, spending too much of their time at the resort, and although he asserted he is not operating a "kangaroo" court, sent his force eight miles away from home to clean out the nest.

Donald Smith, Steubenville, was arrested as the proprietor, although the roadhouse is said to belong to Steubenville liquor interests. Smith was released on $2,000 bond for trial Wednesday on a charge of possessing and selling liquor. Just as the raiders were leaving, Jack Lippert, Steubenville, drove up to the resort with an automobile full of beer. He was also held under $2,000 bond for hearing Wednesday.

A number of slot machines were found in the place and when a man giving his name as Edward L. Moore, Steubenville, told Mayor Montgomery he owned the money-vending machines and wanted them turned over to him, he was promptly placed under arrest and held for hearing under $500 bond.

The raid was put over when the nightly program was at its height, and as the uniformed officers entered there was a shout, "Don't give your right names." The guests were greatly relieved to learn that only the proprietor was to be arrested and the paraphernalia destroyed. A man giving his name as Harry Smith was arrested when he resisted officers when they started a search for liquor. He gave bond for appearance at a hearing later.

The Biggest Power Plant

Recent revelations regarding Muscle Shoals indicate that the ability of that project to produce nitrates has been greatly overrated. It may become a useful adjunct to the national defense in time of war by producing moderate quantities of nitrogen for explosives, but it is not likely ever to dominate the fertilizer industry. The 40,000 tons of nitrogen specified in the Underwood bill is a very small fraction of the country's needs, for either war or agriculture.

Nevertheless, as intelligent critics are pointing out, the Shoals project is a great power plant, with a capacity of over 800,000 horsepower, derivable directly from its big dams, regardless of the costly plants built alongside them for manufacturing purposes. All that power does not have to be used on the spot. It can be poured directly into high tension wires and distributed over a radius of several hundred miles, as a vast, continuous supply of light, heat and power, available for tens of thousands of homes and for industries of all kinds.

The French Debt

It begins to look as if something will be done about the French war debt to the United States. It has been discussed seriously between Ambassador Jusserand and Secretary Mellon. Soon the American debt refunding commission may take it up. France evidently is feeling her way toward a definite proposal, and the commission can act as soon as that is received.

This is a welcome change in the situation. It has seemed often that the French government and people were inclined to repudiate the debt, on the ground that it was merely an American contribution to a common cause and they were under no moral obligation to pay it. The present tendency is to regard it as at least a legal obligation, and one that it is good policy to meet, if not good morals.

There is talk of a low rate of interest, varying from 2 to 3¾ per cent, and a long period of payment, perhaps as much as 80 years, with a possible moratorium of five or 10 years to start with. Americans are less concerned with the terms than with the principle of the thing, and there will be no disposition on the part of the government or the public, to be severe on France.

There is a legal prohibition against giving France or any other debtor an advantage over Great Britain. Thus it is rather to be expected that the French settlement will be practically the same as that made with Britain and several minor debtors. If a lower interest rate is granted or any part of the principal remitted, of course, a similar benefit will have to be granted to Great Britain and the rest. America must treat all her debtors alike.

Careful About Stocks

"We are going into the greatest stock boom ever known," says Warren S. Stone, president of the Locomotive Engineers and head of the Brotherhood's banks. "There will be 30 or 40 big foreign loans made in the next year or year and a half. They are dressing up old stocks and bonds, foreign and domestic, in new clothes, and selling them to the public. This is going to go on until they have got all the gold drained out of the country, and got most of the suckers' money, and then we are going to have another period of depression."

It may not be so bad as that, but the tendency is that way, and the public had better take warning accordingly. As Wall Street grows active and optimistic, and the market for securities improves, the financial crooks get busy again. There may soon be a deluge of "blue sky" stocks, not worth the paper they are engraved on.

It is a good rule to question every security offered and make the salesman prove its value. It is still safer, in most cases, to put savings into the bank or into first mortgages or real estate. Bankers are pretty reliable, and land never evaporates.

A NICE LITTLE POEM

The American Hebrew publishes the four lines below, writtten by Arthur Guiterman:

"When I am dead, what I have felt so long
My soul shall know in clearer, purer light;
That where I loathed and hated I was wrong;
That where I loved and pitied, I was right."

That is nice poetry and good sound morals.

The writer tells you, in the poet's way of talking, that when he is dead he expects to go to heaven, see everything "in clearer, purer light" and discover that whenever he "loathed and hated" anything on this earth, he was absolutely wrong, but whenever he "loved and pitied" he was right.

All that is sound and pure. Usually we are wrong when we hate, and right when we love and pity.

We hate usually because we are as ignorant as the thing, or the person, hated. As we get older and see things more clearly, pity frequently replaces hate—love replaces it less often.

BUT MAYBE IT ISN'T SO

But what about the general theory, that when we leave here, after suffering, hating, loathing and pitying, we suddenly go to a heaven where everything becomes clear and plain?

Time has lasted forever; it never began. Even this passing earth has rolled around the sun for several hundred millions of years. Everybody except the very ignorant knows it; science proves it. Even clergymen that used to believe and preach that the earth was only 6,000 years old, will tell you now that there are monuments on the earth more than 6,000 years old, that the old figuring was wrong, and that the age of the earth runs into hundreds of millions of years.

What have we been doing all that time past? It is likely that imperfect creatures like ourselves, leave this earth, with all our hating and loathing, our ignorance, our jealousies, and suddenly become perfect?

Let us hope so, of course, and try to believe it.

But is such a perfection could be made overnight, by dying and going into the grave, why send us here to suffer, for 75 and 100 years, making all these unnecessary mistakes?

The Bible says: "In my Father's house there are many mansions." Does that mean perhaps that this earth is one of the many mansions, and from this earth we go to some one of the other "many mansions," living perhaps on thousands of planets, and thousands of suns, in different forms and gradually improving until we really are civilized and fully developed atoms of consciousness? Millions of men believe in that reincarnation idea.

There are savage tribes that still offer living human sacrifices to their gods. That happened in India not long ago. There are savages that eat each other, some that are not able to count above five.

What was the use of sending them here to struggle through filth, ignorance and brutality, unless they really needed the training and the sad experience?

If you could take an African bushman or a degraded, superstitious Thibetian Lama and suddenly make him fit for heaven and perfection, after one short life here, why wasn't the thing made right away without submitting the poor creature to this horrible experience? It's very puzzling.

Everything we see on this earth indicates that changes come extremely slowly We can see how it has taken millions of years for continents to rise and sink, and tens of millions of years for the different kinds of animals gradually to develop.

It may be that all we have to do is die, and decay, and then suddenly see everything with a "purer, clearer light." But it doesn't seem probable.

Also the poet may be wrong when he says, "Where I loathed and hated, I was wrong." That's a nice sentiment at first glace. But after all, loathing and hating are ways of showing disapproval.

If men hadn't gradually, thanks to the influence of women, learned to "loathe and hate" cannibalism they would still be eating each other. If men led by the great Wilberforce, and by the conscience of the British government—don't laugh, it has a conscience—had not learned to "loathe and hate" slavery, there would still be tens of millions of human beings living and dying under the lash.

"Loving and pitying," of course, are admirable, beautiful. Love is the greatest power on earth. The love of the husband and wife had gradually changed the prognathous troglodyte, with his jaw sticking out, into the gentle face of John W. Davis, who wouldn't hurt a fly.

And pity is all that Shakespeare says it is, and more.

But don't underestimate hate and loathing. Without them the world might not have got rid of its tyrants so quickly.

GOOD BEDS ESSENTIAL

A great service was rendered the United States and the whole world when George M. Pullman, born a poor boy, curing himself, as he told this writer, of the habit of smoking five-cent cigars that he might save the money for experiment, built his first Pullman sleeping car.

He built the car and ran it, standing beside the track selling tickets on his one car, which ran from Chicago to Springfied, Ill. He told this writer how he used to sell one berth to two men, each paying 50 cents. On one occasion a man that had paid his 50 cents for half a berth came out and said, "Put me somewhere else. I can't sleep in there. The other man is taking up all the room."

"I went in," said Mr. Pullman, "and there was a tall man, with knees doubled up, so that the other man really COULDN'T get into the berth. And the man doubled up in the berth, by the way, was Abraham Lincoln."

When George M. Pullman started the sleeping car system that has now spread all over the world, he added years to the life, and infinitely to the comfort and health of the world's travelers, and especially to the business men of the United States. He rendered a great service to civilization and progress and to prosperity.

What applies to George M. Pullman applies to every man that manufacturers a comfortable, well-made bed.

It matters not whether it be plain or elaborate, expensive or inexpensive, provided it be comfortable.

Among beautiful words are these: "He giveth his beloveth sleep."

Great credit is due the man that gives good sleep to his fellow citizen by building a bed with springs and mattress, on which the body can thoroughly relax, find genuine comfort and lose itself in that sleep which is to the nervous system and all the energies of that body what charging the battery is to an electric automobile.

In sleep digestion is digestion perfected.

In sleep alone the exhausted nervous forces are restored.

In sleep alone the mind finds the complete rest in which it clears itself of worries.

Only Shakespeare could describe sleep—"nature's sweet restorer" that "knits up the raveled sleeve of care," etc.

But the American manufacturer who sells good and comfortable beds at a fair price does something that Shakespeare couldn't do. He doesn't describe sleep, but he gives sleep.

MUST BE MADE UP PROPERLY

Honor also the woman that knows how to make up a bed properly.

Sheets, blankets, well tucked in at the bottom, long enough at the top to be tucked in around the neck, a bed well smoothed out, well ventilated in the morning, turned over to air, pillows properly punched and banged, to keep elesticity alive and their contents evenly divided, all that is real domestic science.

To write a nice lullaby is a fine thing, but to manufacture a good bed and then make it up properly is a much finer thing.

NEWSY GOSSIP OF BIG CITIES

By HARRY R. FLORY.

BRISTOL, England, Dec. 16.—England's only free-life, reef-love Utopian colony has been forced to recognize outside authority—much against the will of the majority of the members.

It's all the fault of a persistant internal revenue agent who insisted upon collecting tax upon the forty-odd acres of land owned by the colony collectively on the top of Cotswold Hills, near here.

The simple life adherents, 70 in number, believed themselves free from interference when they purchased the land, examined the title deeds to see that they were correctly drawn up and then burned them at a public ceremony. As far as they were concerned the land was free and was to remain free from then on.

The tax collector thought differently. He wanted money which the colonists did not have. They made their own clothing, built their own cottages and raised their own food and, therefore, had no cause to desire the medium of exchange utilized by less fortunate beings.

Colonists offered to work out the tax, but the collector was adamant and carted away the only piano on the hilltop. The next year he seized the potato crop and thereafter for several years the colonists took turns going to jail in default of payment.

That became tiresome, so the colonists finally decided to recognize the collector as an evil which could not be eliminated. By organizing a co-operative handcraft's society and a co-operative bakery they contrived to sell enough of their products to the outside world to secure sufficient funds to pay the yearly taxes.

Now life in the colony once more goes on in almost the ordinary way—almost but not quite, for with the tax collector evil they also accepted other outside world institutions, such as central heating plans for their houses and telephones, and now one daring individual has installed a wireless outfit. Wireless concerts now take the place of home-made entertainments they formerly enjoyed—amateur productions of Shaw's plays, musical evenings and lectures of psychoanalysis.

"Customs, Not Laws," and "Variety, Not Uniformity," are the slogans of the colonists.

Thus there is no chairman of the colony and no governing board, and the members are not compelled to dress alike. Some wear home-spuns and sandals, while others, since the outside world has been recognized, wear snappy sports costumes, Grecian costumes were discarded because they did not furnish sufficient protection against the cold.

Gaspard Marin, a bearded, sandaled man possessing no more authority than any other member of the colony, willingly expounded some of the ideas of the peculiar group.

"There are no rich and no poor here," he said. "If anyone is in trouble everyone else helps. The majority of people here are vegeterians, but not all. Most were opposed to war, but there were one or two exceptions. No one went from here to the war. Some were imprisoned, but the authorities gave it up, for they knew we would rather die than shoulder guns.

"You will find adherents to a score or more different religions. Outsiders would tell you we have many nationalities also, but among ourselves there is no distinction.

"Most of us are not interested in politics, though the sympathies of some could possibly be classified as leaning toward the socialistic and anarchistic schools of thought."

DINNER STORIES

A man was arguing that Aberdonians had no sense of humor, and instanced a case where a man entered a cigar shop and was told by the dealer that if he bought 1,000 cigars of a certain brands he would get a present of a hand-painted dinner service, if 2,000 he would get a gold watch, and if 5,000 a grand piano.

"And," added the customer, "if I smoke the 5,000 I shall probably get a harp."

This story was told to a man in Aberdeen, and it did not raise a smile. Two days afterwards the Aberdonian called upon the story-teller and said, "I see that joke of yours. It would be so much easier to carry a harp than a grand piano."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—The most expensive jail in America and probably the worst is the Ludlow street jail—home of the famous "Alimony Club." Husbands who refuse to pay wives alimony could be boarded at the finest hotel in town cheaper than in Ludlow.

Prisoners in the Eveless Eden are nearly always men of money. They do pretty much as they please even to attending the Broadway theaters with friendly keepers. Ludlow is a shabby building hemmed in by beetling and rickety tenements.

The jail was built by Boss Tweed in 1861 and as an ironic touch he spent his last days in it for his participation in municipal graft. Ever since a sort of curse has hung ever old Ludlow. It has been the target for a hundred probes.

Why it is not torn down remains a mystery. The site is worth more than $300,000. The upkeep costs about $50,000 a year. Never at one time are there more than dozen prisoners there. To minister to these are a warden and his deputy, 11 keepers, three cleaners, two engineers, two cooks, a physician, a matron with assistant and a laundress.

It used to be that men whose matrimonial barks went on rocks and were bludgeoned by courts for big alimoney could go to Ludlow and stay six months and all future payments were wiped out. But the law is changed. Those who won't pay alimony can be returned there indefinitely.

For a man with money Ludlow is a fine place for a rest. He has the freedom of the big yard. He can order all the delicacies of the season, smoke the best cigars, read all the newspapers and latest books and even be entertained by the radio.

He also has the satisfaction of knowing he is saving his weekly alimony. The old jail is so much of a joke that it is always the topic of travesty in revues and it has been ridiculed in hundreds of song lyrics and newspaper stories.

Several theatrical producers are waging war on theatrical dancing schools. It is the custom of many of them to give prospective pupils the idea they can be placed in any show they like, if they take the full course of instruction. As a matter of fact the number of dancers selected from these schools by producers is comparatively nil. There are at least 40 of these schools now operating on the fringe of the Rialto district. A few are sincere but most are not.

An apartment hotel for bachelors tried the European system of collecting tips for three months and then abandoned it because of dissatisfaction. The plan was to add 10 per cent of the amount of the weekly bill to be distributed among the servants. It was found, however, that those who gave a few gratuities on the side got the best service and other patrons complained.

They tell of a man leaving a place near the custom house, taking an envelope from his pocket and looking at something therein. Then he swooned. He had achieved a good passport picture.

The famous Fratellini—the brothers of the Cirque Medrano in Paris—are coming to America soon. Each one of the brothers has children who are being taught the art of the mime. Their great, great grandfathers before them were clowns.

SPEED LIMITS FOR AUTOS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The speed limit for automobiles on the open highway should be fixed at 35 miles an hour, while in cities, towns and villages the limit should not be lower than 15 miles an hour, according to the committee on traffic control of the national conference on street and highway safety, which also says that there are three schools of thought on the subject of speed limits.

One holds that the average motorist is incapable of judging for himself what is a safe speed and that the only was of controlling him is to prescribe absolute speed limits for each section of the street or highway.

The second school advocates the designation of limits beyond which there is presumption of reckless driving on the part of the operator, whether or not higher maximum limits are prescribed.

The third believes that the law should be directed solely against reckless driving; that it is impossible to fix any safe limit and that the attempt to do so, with the resultant constant violation of and contempt for the law, is one of the chief causes of motor accidents. The committee does not make the comparison, but experts in attendance at the conference do not hesitate to say that a too exacting traffic law is like the prohibition amendment and its enforcement statute in that one of its first effects is to incite many people to law violations.

The committee in its report said that the third school of thought is right in principle and recommended a basic control of speed through uniform state law which lay the emphasis on reckless driving. At the same time it pointed out that speed may be a large factor in street and highway safety, both through the lessened control of more drivers of vehicles running at high speed, and the likelihood of more serious consequence in case of accident. In fixed speed limits, the committee admits, traffic authorities have a yardstick by which to measure, however roughly, violations of the principle of safe driving. Therefore cities, villages, townships and other political sub-divisions should be empowered to establish speed limits within their boundaries in harmony with the state law.

SOME LIMITS TOO LOW

"Under present conditions some small municipalities establish limits considerably below those found by experienced authorities to be safe, and sometimes in direct conflict with the state law, and then proceed to enforce these unreasonable restrictions to the point of persecution of passing motorists," says the report, referring to the speed traps that thousands of motor tourists have encountered to their sorrow and cost. "To prevent this the state law should prohibit any municipality or other local sub-division from establishing any limit lower than 15 miles per hour. The law should also require that the boundaries of all speed zones be clearly marked.

"Out side of cities and incorporated towns and villages your committee believes that the safe allowable speed depends so largely upon the traffic conditions, the character of the highway and other conditions, that there should merely be established a limit beyond which there is presumption of reckless driving. Your committee would place the limit at 35 miles per hour on the open highway.

"Under favorable conditions motorists might go faster than this, but in case of accidents or court proceedings for any cause it should be incumbent upon the operator fo prove affirmatively that he was not driving recklessly. On through-traffic highways protected by boulevard stops generally higher speeds may be permitted than on other highways."

Collisions occur frequently at street and highway intersections, and, in cities, at the outlets of alleys, it is pointed out. Some cities have established very low speed limits at such points. When the traffic is light and the view unobstructed these limits can often be exceeded with safety, and they are generally little regarded by motorists. At controlled intersections, also, traffic is frequently conducted at greater speeds.

Such cases illustrate the importance of stressing the prohibition of reckless driving irrespective of speed.

SIX MILES MAY BE RECKLESS

To drive out of an alley into a street at as low a speed as sixe miles an hour may be to drive recklessly, both on account of pedestrians and on account of other motor vehicles. The committee likewise holds that driving into or across an important thoroughfare from a secondary street or highway without observing the traffic in each direction, taking advantage of the rule which in most localities gives the right of way to the vehicle on the right, is reckless driving, and should be dealt with accordingly.

Many motorists contend that often a persistently slow driver is as troublesome, if not actually as much of a menace to traffic as the speeder, and in consequence have advocated a law or regulation requiring all vehicles to maintain at least a certain minimum speed. However, the committee does not, upon investigation, agree with that idea.

"On highways of heavy travel," it says, "particularly those of heavy travel in each direction, it is obvious that one prolific source of danger can be eliminated if all of the vehicles in one direction move at the same rate of speed and there is no overtaking. The excessively slow vehicle on such a highway which impels all drivers behind it to overtake it may be as serious a menace to traffic in the opposite direction as the speed maniac who want to overtake all others. Your committee doubts the feasibility of attempting by legislation to compel motorists using heavily traveled highways to maintain the prevailing speed on the highway, but believes efforts should be made to educate the individual motorist to do this for the safety and comfort of his fellow motorists."

The committee lays great stress upon the importance of having traffic laws uniform and reasonable, saying that it is well known that most of the laws and regulations everywhere are violated frequently, and that almost every motor vehicle operator, however good a citizen he may be, violates some traffic law or rule occasionally. Because so many of these laws are practically unenforceable and so many of them unreasonable, an unwholesome contempt for the law and inclination to substitute individual judgment for the prescribed rules has grown up throughout the country. The committee finds that this contempt has been enhanced by the great lack of uniformity in different localities.

"Rules of the road should be uniform in detail throughout the country," says the report. "These will naturally have to be supplemented by special requirements to fit local conditions, but even so they should be uniform in principle, so that the motorist from St. Louis, for instance, may know what to expect in the way of local requirements in Cleveland."

The motor vehicle conference committee, the council of national defense, the international police conference and other associations have already done much work toward the standardization of traffic laws and regulations, but as yet the various states have not gone far toward adopting the fruits of this work.

The Biggest Power Plant

Recent revelations regarding Muscle Shoals indicate that the ability of that project to produce nitrates has been greatly overrated. It may become a useful adjunct to the national defense in time of war by producing moderate quantities of nitrogen for explosives, but it is not likely ever to dominate the fertilizer industry. The 40,000 tons of nitrogen specified in the Underwood bill is a very small fraction of the country's needs, for either war or agriculture.

Nevertheless, as intelligent critics are pointing out, the Shoals project is a great power plant, with a capacity of over 800,000 horsepower, derivable directly from its big dams, regardless of the costly plants built alongside them for manufacturing purposes. All that power does not have to be used on the spot. It can be poured directly into high tension wires and distributed over a radius of several hundred miles, as a vast, continuous supply of light, heat and power, available for tens of thousands of homes and for industries of all kinds.

But don't underestimate hate and loathing. Without them the world might not have got rid of its tyrants so quickly.

GOOD BEDS ESSENTIAL

A great service was rendered the United States and the whole world when George M. Pullman, born a poor boy, curing himself, as he told this writer, of the habit of smoking five-cent cigars that he might save the money for experiment, built his first Pullman sleeping car.

He built the car and ran it, standing beside the track selling tickets on his one car, which ran from Chicago to Springfied, Ill. He told this writer how he used to sell one berth to two men, each paying 50 cents. On one occasion a man that had paid his 50 cents for half a berth came out and said, "Put me somewhere else. I can't sleep in there. The other man is taking up all the room."

"I went in," said Mr. Pullman, "and there was a tall man, with knees doubled up, so that the other man really COULDN'T get into the berth. And the man doubled up in the berth, by the way, was Abraham Lincoln."

When George M. Pullman started the sleeping car system that has now spread all over the world, he added years to the life, and infinitely to the comfort and health of the world's travelers, and especially to the business men of the United States. He rendered a great service to civilization and progress and to prosperity.

What applies to George M. Pullman applies to every man that manufacturers a comfortable, well-made bed.

It matters not whether it be plain or elaborate, expensive or inexpensive, provided it be comfortable.

Among beautiful words are these: "He giveth his beloveth sleep."

Great credit is due the man that gives good sleep to his fellow citizen by building a bed with springs and mattress, on which the body can thoroughly relax, find genuine comfort and lose itself in that sleep which is to the nervous system and all the energies of that body what charging the battery is to an electric automobile.

In sleep digestion is digestion perfected.

In sleep alone the exhausted nervous forces are restored.

In sleep alone the mind finds the complete rest in which it clears itself of worries.

Only Shakespeare could describe sleep—"nature's sweet restorer" that "knits up the raveled sleeve of care," etc.

But the American manufacturer who sells good and comfortable beds at a fair price does something that Shakespeare couldn't do. He doesn't describe sleep, but he gives sleep.

MUST BE MADE UP PROPERLY

Honor also the woman that knows how to make up a bed properly.

Sheets, blankets, well tucked in at the bottom, long enough at the top to be tucked in around the neck, a bed well smoothed out, well ventilated in the morning, turned over to air, pillows properly punched and banged, to keep elesticity alive and their contents evenly divided, all that is real domestic science.

To write a nice lullaby is a fine thing, but to manufacture a good bed and then make it up properly is a much finer thing.

BRISTOL, England, Dec. 16.—England's only free-life, reef-love Utopian colony has been forced to recognize outside authority—much against the will of the majority of the members.

It's all the fault of a persistant internal revenue agent who insisted upon collecting tax upon the forty-odd acres of land owned by the colony collectively on the top of Cotswold Hills, near here.

The simple life adherents, 70 in number, believed themselves free from interference when they purchased the land, examined the title deeds to see that they were correctly drawn up and then burned them at a public ceremony. As far as they were concerned the land was free and was to remain free from then on.

The tax collector thought differently. He wanted money which the colonists did not have. They made their own clothing, built their own cottages and raised their own food and, therefore, had no cause to desire the medium of exchange utilized by less fortunate beings.

Colonists offered to work out the tax, but the collector was adamant and carted away the only piano on the hilltop. The next year he seized the potato crop and thereafter for several years the colonists took turns going to jail in default of payment.

That became tiresome, so the colonists finally decided to recognize the collector as an evil which could not be elminated. By organizing a co-operative handcraft's society and a co-operative bakery they contrived to sell enough of their products to the outside world to secure sufficient funds to pay the yearly taxes.

Now life in the colony once more goes on in almost the ordinary way—almost but not quite, for with the tax collector evil they also accepted other outside world institutions, such as central heating plans for their houses and telephones, and now one daring individual has installed a wireless outfit. Wireless concerts now take the place of home-made entertainments they formerly enjoyed—amateur productions of Shaw's plays, musical evenings and lectures of psychoanalysis.

"Customs, Not Laws," and "Variety, Not Uniformity," are the slogans of the colonists.

Thus there is no chairman of the colony and no governing board, and the members are not compelled to dress alike. Some wear home-spuns and sandals, while others, since the outside world has been recognized, wear snappy sports costumes, Grecian costumes were discarded because they did not furnish sufficient protection against the cold.

Gaspard Marin, a bearded, sandaled man possessing no more authority than any other member of the colony, willingly expounded some of the ideas of the peculiar group.

"There are no rich and no poor here," he said. "If anyone is in trouble everyone else helps. The majority of people here are vegeterians, but not all. Most were opposed to war, but there were one or two exceptions. No one went from here to the war. Some were imprisoned, but the authorities gave it up, for they knew we would rather die than shoulder guns.

"You will find adherents to a score or more different religions. Outsiders would tell you we have many nationalities also, but among ourselves there is no distinction.

"Most of us are not interested in politics, though the sympathies of some could possibly be classified as leaning toward the socialistic and anarchistic schools of thought."

DINNER STORIES

A man was arguing that Aberdonians had no sense of humor, and instanced a case where a man entered a cigar shop and was told by the dealer that if he bought 1,000 cigars of a certain brands he would get a present of a hand-painted dinner service, if 2,000 he would get a gold watch, and if 5,000 a grand piano.

"And," added the customer, "if I smoke the 5,000 I shall probably get a harp."

This story was told to a man in Aberdeen, and it did not raise a smile. Two days afterwards the Aberdonian called upon the story-teller and said, "I see that joke of yours. It would be so much easier to carry a harp than a grand piano."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—The most expensive jail in America and probably the worst is the Ludlow street jail—home of the famous "Alimony Club." Husbands who refuse to pay wives alimony could be boarded at the finest hotel in town cheaper than in Ludlow.

Prisoners in the Eveless Eden are nearly always men of money. They do pretty much as they please even to attending the Broadway theaters with friendly keepers. Ludlow is a shabby building hemmed in by beetling and rickety tenements.

The jail was built by Boss Tweed in 1861 and as an ironic touch he spent his last days in it for his participation in municipal graft. Ever since a sort of curse has hung ever old Ludlow. It has been the target for a hundred probes.

Why it is not torn down remains a mystery. The site is worth more than $300,000. The upkeep costs about $50,000 a year. Never at one time are there more than dozen prisoners there. To minister to these are a warden and his deputy, 11 keepers, three cleaners, two engineers, two cooks, a physician, a matron with assistant and a laundress.

It used to be that men whose matrimonial barks went on rocks and were bludgeoned by courts for big alimoney could go to Ludlow and stay six months and all future payments were wiped out. But the law is changed. Those who won't pay alimony can be returned there indefinitely.

For a man with money Ludlow is a fine place for a rest. He has the freedom of the big yard. He can order all the delicacies of the season, smoke the best cigars, read all the newspapers and latest books and even be entertained by the radio.

He also has the satisfaction of knowing he is saving his weekly alimony. The old jail is so much of a joke that it is always the topic of travesty in revues and it has been ridiculed in hundreds of song lyrics and newspaper stories.

Several theatrical producers are waging war on theatrical dancing schools. It is the custom of many of them to give prospective pupils the idea they can be placed in any show they like, if they take the full course of instruction. As a matter of fact the number of dancers selected from these schools by producers is comparatively nil. There are at least 40 of these schools now operating on the fringe of the Rialto district. A few are sincere but most are not.

An apartment hotel for bachelors tried the European system of collecting tips for three months and then abandoned it because of dissatisfaction. The plan was to add 10 per cent of the amount of the weekly bill to be distributed among the servants. It was found, however, that those who gave a few gratuities on the side got the best service and other patrons complained.

They tell of a man leaving a place near the custom house, taking an envelope from his pocket and looking at something therein. Then he swooned. He had achieved a good passport picture.

The famous Fratellini—the brothers of the Cirque Medrano in Paris—are coming to America soon. Each one of the brothers has children who are being taught the art of the mime. Their great, great grandfathers before them were clowns.

SPEED LIMITS FOR AUTOS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The speed limit for automobiles on the open highway should be fixed at 35 miles an hour, while in cities, towns and villages the limit should not be lower than 15 miles an hour, according to the committee on traffic control of the national conference on street and highway safety, which also says that there are three schools of thought on the subject of speed limits.

One holds that the average motorist is incapable of judging for himself what is a safe speed and that the only was of controlling him is to prescribe absolute speed limits for each section of the street or highway.

The second school advocates the designation of limits beyond which there is presumption of reckless driving on the part of the operator, whether or not higher maximum limits are prescribed.

The third believes that the law should be directed solely against reckless driving; that it is impossible to fix any safe limit; and that the attempt to do so, with the resultant constant violation of and contempt for the law, is one of the chief causes of motor accidents. The committee does not make the comparison, but experts in attendance at the conference do not hesitate to say that a too exacting traffic law is like the prohibition amendment and its enforcement statute in that one of its first effects is to incite many people to law violations.

The committee in its report said that the third school of thought is right in principle and recommended a basic control of speed through uniform state law which lay the emphasis on reckless driving. At the same time it pointed out that speed may be a large factor in street and highway safety, both through the lessened control of more drivers of vehicles running at high speed, and the likelihood of more serious consequence in case of accident. In fixed speed limits, the committee admits, traffic authorities have a yardstick by which to measure, however roughly, violations of the principle of safe driving. Therefore cities, villages, townships and other political sub-divisions should be empowered to establish speed limits within their boundaries in harmony with the state law.

SOME LIMITS TOO LOW

"Under present conditions some small municipalities establish limits considerably below those found by experienced authorities to be safe, and sometimes in direct conflict with the state law, and then proceed to enforce these unreasonable restrictions to the point of persecution of passing motorists," says the report, referring to the speed traps that thousands of motor tourists have encountered to their sorrow and cost. "To prevent this the state law should prohibit any municipality or other local sub-division from establishing any limit lower than 15 miles per hour. The law should also require that the boundaries of all speed zones be clearly marked.

"Out side of cities and incorporated towns and villages your committee believes that the safe allowable speed depends so largely upon the traffic conditions, the character of the highway and other conditions, that there should merely be established a limit beyond which there is presumption of reckless driving. Your committee would place the limit at 35 miles per hour on the open highway.

"Under favorable conditions motorists might go faster than this, but in case of accidents or court proceedings for any cause it should be incumbent upon the operator to prove affirmatively that he was not driving recklessly. On through-traffic highways protected by boulevard stops generally higher speeds may be permitted than on other highways."

Collisions occur frequently at street and highway intersections, and, in cities, at the outlets of alleys, it is pointed out. Some cities have established very low speed limits at such points. When the traffic is light and the view unobstructed these limits can often be exceeded with safety, and they are generally little regarded by motorists. At controlled intersections, also, traffic is frequently conducted at greater speeds.

SIX MILES MAY BE RECKLESS

To drive out of an alley into a street at as low a speed as sixe miles an hour may be to drive recklessly, both on account of pedestrians and on account of other motor vehicles. The committee likewise holds that driving into or across an important thoroughfare from a secondary street or highway without observing the traffic in each direction, taking advantage of the rule which in most localities gives the right of way to the vehicle on the right, is reckless driving, and should be dealt with accordingly.

Many motorists contend that often a persistently slow driver is as troublesome, if not actually as much of a menace to traffic as the speeder, and in consequence have advocated a law or regulation requiring all vehicles to maintain at least a certain minimum speed. However, the committee does not, upon investigation, agree with that idea.

"On highways of heavy travel," it says, "particularly those of heavy travel in each direction, it is obvious that one prolific source of danger can be eliminated if all of the vehicles in one direction move at the same rate of speed and there is no overtaking. The excessively slow vehicle on such a highway which impels all drivers behind it to overtake it may be as serious a menace to traffic in the opposite direction as the speed maniac who want to overtake all others. Your committee doubts the feasibility of attempting by legislation to compel motorists using heavily traveled highways to maintain the prevailing speed on the highway, but believes efforts should be made to educate the individual motorist to do this for the safety and comfort of his fellow motorists."

The committee lays great stress upon the importance of having traffic laws uniform and reasonable, saying that it is well known that most of the laws and regulations everywhere are violated frequently, and that almost every motor vehicle operator, however good a citizen he may be, violates some traffic law or rule occasionally. Because so many of these laws are practically unenforceable and so many of them unreasonable, an unwholesome contempt for the law and inclination to substitute individual judgment for the prescribed rules has grown up throughout the country. The committee finds that this contempt has been enhanced by the great lack of uniformity in different localities.

"Rules of the road should be uniform in detail throughout the country," says the report. "These will naturally have to be supplemented by special requirements to fit local conditions, but even so they should be uniform in principle, so that the motorist from St. Louis, for instance, may know what to expect in the way of local requirements in Cleveland."

The motor vehicle conference committee, the council of national defense, the international police conference and other associations have already done much work toward the standardization of traffic laws and regulations, but as yet the various states have not gone far toward adopting the fruits of this work.

The Biggest Power Plant

Recent revelations regarding Muscle Shoals indicate that the ability of that project to produce nitrates has been greatly overrated. It may become a useful adjunct to the national defense in time of war by producing moderate quantities of nitrogen for explosives, but it is not likely ever to dominate the fertilizer industry. The 40,000 tons of nitrogen specified in the Underwood bill is a very small fraction of the country's needs, for either war or agriculture.

Nevertheless, as intelligent critics are pointing out, the Shoals project is a great power plant, with a capacity of over 800,000 horsepower, derivable directly from its big dams, regardless of the costly plants built alongside them for manufacturing purposes. All that power does not have to be used on the spot. It can be poured directly into high tension wires and distributed over a radius of several hundred miles, as a vast, continuous supply of light, heat and power, available for tens of thousands of homes and for industries of all kinds.

That, it seems safe to say, is the supreme value of Muscle Shoals. It is capable of fertilizing industry more than agriculture, whatever it may do for the latter.

The French Debt

It begins to look as if something will be done about the French war debt to the United States. It has been discussed seriously between Ambassador Jusserand and Secretary Mellon. Soon the American debt refunding commission may take it up. France evidently is feeling her way toward a definite proposal, and the commission can act as soon as that is received.

This is a welcome change in the situation. It has seemed often that the French government and people were inclined to repudiate the debt, on the ground that it was merely an American contribution to a common cause and they were under no moral obligation to pay it. The present tendency is to regard it as at least a legal obligation, and one that it is good policy to meet, if not good morals.

There is talk of a low rate of interest, varying from 2 to 3¾ per cent, and a long period of payment, perhaps as much as 80 years, with a possible moratorium of five or 10 years to start with. Americans are less concerned with the terms than with the principle of the thing, and there will be no disposition on the part of the government or the public, to be severe on France.

There is a legal prohibition against giving France or any other debtor an advantage over Great Britain. Thus it is rather to be expected that the French settlement will be practically the same as that made with Britain and several minor debtors. If a lower interest rate is granted or any part of the principal remitted, of course, a similar benefit will have to be granted to Great Britain and the rest. America must treat all her debtors alike.

Careful About Stocks

"We are going into the greatest stock boom ever known," says Warren S. Stone, president of the Locomotive Engineers and head of the Brotherhood's banks. "There will be 30 or 40 big foreign loans made in the next year or year and a half. They are dressing up old stocks and bonds, foreign and domestic, in new clothes, and selling them to the public. This is going to go on until they have got all the gold drained out of the country, and got most of the suckers' money, and then we are going to have another period of depression."

It may not be so bad as that, but the tendency is that way, and the public had better take warning accordingly. As Wall Street grows active and optimistic, and the market for securities improves, the financial crooks get busy again. There may soon be a deluge of "blue sky" stocks, not worth the paper they are engraved on.

It is a good rule to question every security offered and make the salesman prove its value. It is still safer, in most cases, to put savings into the bank or into first mortgages or real estate. Bankers are pretty reliable, and land never evaporates.

A NICE LITTLE POEM

The American Hebrew publishes the four lines below, writtten by Arthur Guiterman:

"When I am dead, what I have felt so long
My soul shall know in clearer, purer light;
That where I loathed and hated I was wrong;
That where I loved and pitied, I was right."

That is nice poetry and good sound morals.

The writer tells you, in the poet's way of talking, that when he is dead he expects to go to heaven, see everything "in clearer, purer light" and discover that whenever he "loathed and hated" anything on this earth, he was absolutely wrong, but whenever he "loved and pitied" he was right.

All that is sound and pure. Usually we are wrong when we hate, and right when we love and pity.

We hate usually because we are as ignorant as the thing, or the person, hated. As we get older and see things more clearly, pity frequently replaces hate—love replaces it less often.

BUT MAYBE IT ISN'T SO

But what about the general theory, that when we leave here, after suffering, hating, loathing and pitying, we suddenly go to a heaven where everything becomes clear and plain?

Time has lasted forever; it never began. Even this passing earth has rolled around the sun for several hundred millions of years. Everybody except the very ignorant knows it; science proves it. Even clergymen that used to believe and preach that the earth was only 6,000 years old, will tell you now that there are monuments on the earth more than 6,000 years old that the old figuring was wrong, and that the age of the earth runs into hundreds of millions of years.

What have we been doing all that time past? It is likely that imperfect creatures like ourselves, leave this earth, with all our hating and loathing, our ignorance, our jealousies, and suddenly become perfect?

Let us hope so, of course, and try to believe it.

But is such a perfection could be made overnight, by dying and going into the grave, why send us here to suffer, for 75 and 100 years, making all these unnecessary mistakes?

The Bible says: "In my Father's house there are many mansions." Does that mean perhaps that this earth is one of the many mansions, and from this earth we go to some one of the other "many mansions," living perhaps on thousands of planets, and thousands of suns, in different forms and gradually improving until we really are civilized and fully developed atoms of consciousness? Millions of men believe in that reincarnation idea.

There are savage tribes that still offer living human sacrifices to their gods. That happened in India not long ago. There are savages that eat each other, some that are not able to count above five.

What was the use of sending them here to struggle through filth, ignorance and brutality, unless they really needed the training and the sad experience?

If you could take an African bushman or a degraded, superstitious Thibetian Lama and suddenly make him fit for heaven and perfection, after one short life here, why wasn't the thing made right away without submitting the poor creature to this horrible experience? It's very puzzling.

Everything we see on this earth indicates that changes come extremely slowly We can see how it has taken millions of years for continents to rise and sink, and tens of millions of years for the different kinds of animals gradually to develop.

It may be that all we have to do is die, and decay, and then suddenly see everything with a "purer, clearer light." But it doesn't seem probable.

Also the poet may be wrong when he says, "Where I loathed and hated, I was wrong." That's a nice sentiment at first glace. But after all, loathing and hating are ways of showing disapproval.

If men hadn't gradually, thanks to the influence of women, learned to "loathe and hate" cannibalism they would still be eating each other. If men led by the great Wilberforce, and by the conscience of the British government—don't laugh, it has a conscience—had not learned to "loathe and hate" slavery, there would still be tens of millions of human beings living and dying under the lash.

"Loving and pitying," of course, are admirable, beautiful. Love is the greatest power on earth. The love of the husband and wife had gradually changed the prognathous troglodyte, with his jaw sticking out, into the gentle face of John W. Davis, who wouldn't hurt a fly.

And pity is all that Shakespeare says it is, and more.

But don't underestimate hate and loathing. Without them the world might not have got rid of its tyrants so quickly.

It is a nice little poem, however.

Prisoners in the Eveless Eden are nearly always men of money. They do pretty much as they please even to attending the Broadway theaters with friendly keepers. Ludlow is a shabby building hemmed in by beetling and rickety tenements.

The jail was built by Boss Tweed in 1861 and as an ironic touch he spent his last days in it for his participation in municipal graft. Ever since a sort of curse has hung ever old Ludlow. It has been the target for a hundred probes.

Why it is not torn down remains a mystery. The site is worth more than $300,000. The upkeep costs about $50,000 a year. Never at one time are there more than dozen prisoners there. To minister to these are a warden and his deputy, 11 keepers, three cleaners, two engineers, two cooks, a physician, a matron with assistant and a laundress.

It used to be that men whose matrimonial barks went on rocks and were bludgeoned by courts for big alimoney could go to Ludlow and stay six months and all future payments were wiped out. But the law is changed. Those who won't pay alimony can be returned there indefinitely.

For a man with money Ludlow is a fine place for a rest. He has the freedom of the big yard. He can order all the delicacies of the season, smoke the best cigars, read all the newspapers and latest books and even be entertained by the radio.

He also has the satisfaction of knowing he is saving his weekly alimony. The old jail is so much of a joke that it is always the topic of travesty in revues and it has been ridiculed in hundreds of song lyrics and newspaper stories.

Several theatrical producers are waging war on theatrical dancing schools. It is the custom of many of them to give prospective pupils the idea they can be placed in any show they like, if they take the full course of instruction. As a matter of fact the number of dancers selected from these schools by producers is comparatively nil. There are at least 40 of these schools now operating on the fringe of the Rialto district. A few are sincere but most are not.

An apartment hotel for bachelors tried the European system of collecting tips for three months and then abandoned it because of dissatisfaction. The plan was to add 10 per cent of the amount of the weekly bill to be distributed among the servants. It was found, however, that those who gave a few gratuities on the side got the best service and other patrons complained.

They tell of a man leaving a place near the custom house, taking an envelope from his pocket and looking at something therein. Then he swooned. He had achieved a good passport picture.

SPEED LIMITS FOR AUTOS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The speed limit for automobiles on the open highway should be fixed at 35 miles an hour, while in cities, towns and villages the limit should not be lower than 15 miles an hour, according to the committee on traffic control of the national conference on street and highway safety, which also says that there are three schools of thought on the subject of speed limits.

One holds that the average motorist is incapable of judging for himself what is a safe speed and that the only was of controlling him is to prescribe absolute speed limits for each section of the street or highway.

The second school advocates the designation of limits beyond which there is presumption of reckless driving on the part of the operator, whether or not higher maximum limits are prescribed.

The third believes that the law should be directed solely against reckless driving; that it is impossible to fix any safe limit; and that the attempt to do so, with the resultant constant violation of and contempt for the law, is one of the chief causes of motor accidents. The committee does not make the comparison, but experts in attendance at the conference do not hesitate to say that a too exacting traffic law is like the prohibition amendment and its enforcement statute in that one of its first effects is to incite many people to law violations.

The committee in its report said that the third school of thought is right in principle and recommended abasic control of speed through uniform state law which lay the emphasis on reckless driving. At the same time it pointed out that speed may be a large factor in street and highway safety, both through the lessened control of more drivers of vehicles running at high speed, and the likelihood of more serious consequence in case of accident. In fixed speed limits, the committee admits, traffic authorities have a yardstick by which to measure, however roughly, violations of the principle of safe driving. Therefore cities, villages, townships and other political sub-divisions should be empowered to establish speed limits within their boundaries in harmony with the state law.

SOME LIMITS TOO LOW

"Under present conditions some small municipalities establish limits considerably below those found by experienced authorities to be safe, and sometimes in direct conflict with the state law, and then proceed to enforce these unreasonable restrictions to the point of persecution of passing motorists," says the report, referring to the speed traps that thousands of motor tourists have encountered to their sorrow and cost. "To prevent this the state law should prohibit any municipality or other local sub-division from establishing any limit lower than 15 miles per hour. The law should also require that the boundaries of all speed zones be clearly marked.

"Out side of cities and incorporated towns and villages your committee believes that the safe allowable speed depends so largely upon the traffic conditions, the character of the highway and other conditions, that there should merely be established a limit beyond which there is presumption of reckless driving. Your committee would place the limit at 35 miles per hour on the open highway.

"Under favorable conditions motorists might go faster than this, but in case of accidents or court proceedings for any cause it should be incumbent upon the operator fo prove affirmatively that he was not driving recklessly. On through-traffic highways protected by boulevard stops generally higher speeds may be permitted than on other highways."

Collisions occur frequently at street and highway intersections, and, in cities, at the outlet of alleys, it is pointed out. Some cities have established very low speed limits at such points. When the traffic is light and the view unobstructed these limits can often be exceeded with safety, and they are generally little regarded by motorists. At controlled intersections, also, traffic is frequently conducted at greater speeds.

SIX MILES MAY BE RECKLESS

To drive out of an alley into a street at as low a speed as sixe miles an hour may be to drive recklessly, both on account of pedestrians and on account of other motor vehicles. The committee likewise holds that driving into or across an important thoroughfare from a secondary street or highway without observing the traffic in each direction, taking advantage of the rule which in most localities gives the right of way to the vehicle on the right, is reckless driving, and should be dealt with accordingly.

Many motorists contend that often a persistently slow driver is as troublesome, if not actually as much of a menace to traffic as the speeder, and in consequence have advocated a law or regulation requiring all vehicles to maintain at least a certain minimum speed. However, the committee does not, upon investigation, agree with that idea.

"On highways of heavy travel," it says, "particularly those of heavy travel in each direction, it is obvious that one prolific source of danger can be eliminated if all of the vehicles in one direction move at the same rate of speed and there is no overtaking. The excessively slow vehicle on such a highway which impels all drivers behind it to overtake it may be as serious a menace to traffic in the opposite direction as the speed maniac who want to overtake all others. Your committee doubts the feasibility of attempting by legislation to compel motorists using heavily traveled highways to maintain the prevailing speed on the highways, but believes efforts should be made to educate the individual motorist to do this for the safety and comfort of his fellow motorists."

The committee lays great stress upon the importance of having traffic laws uniform and reasonable, saying that it is well known that most of the laws and regulations everywhere are violated frequently, and that almost every motor vehicle operator, however good a citizen he may be, violates some traffic law or rule occasionally. Because so many of these laws are practically unenforceable and so many of them unreasonable, an unwholesome contempt for the law and inclination to substitute individual judgment for the prescribed rules has grown up throughout the country. The committee finds that this contempt has been enhanced by the great lack of uniformity in different localities.

"Rules of the road should be uniform in detail throughout the country," says the report. "These will naturally have to be supplemented by special requirements to fit local conditions, but even so they should be uniform in principle, so that the motorist from St. Louis, for instance, may know what to expect in the way of local requirements in Cleveland."

The motor vehicle conference committee, the council of national defense, the international police conference and other associations have already done much work toward the standardization of traffic laws and regulations, but as yet the various states have not gone far toward adopting the fruits of this work.

The 1925 tags are being distributed at the rate of between 10,000 and 12,000 a day, applications virtually swamping the State Board commissioners' license bureau at Charleston, as indications point to an issuance of 200,000 tags for 1925, as compared with 165,000 in 1924.

The 1925 plates are in gold and blue, the state colors, and many have been received here by local drivers and automobile owners, although it is against the law to display them, until January 1.

Q. How many acres are there of farm land which might be tilled and how many of waste land? M. E.

A. According to statistics published in the 1923 Year Book of the Department of Agriculture, there are in all about 608,000,000 acres of potential crop land in the United States, that is, land physically capable of being utilized for crops some time in the future. Waste land, that is, land that is absolute desert, rock, etc., comprises 67,000 000 acres.

Q. Do races differ much with regard to their resistance to T. B.? D. R. W.

A. The Public Health Service says that races differ very much in their resistance to tuberculosis. The colored population of the United States has a death rate from tuberculosis approximately three times as great as that of the white. The American Indian, likewise, is extremely susceptible to both pulmonary and other forms of tuberculosis. The disease often runs an extremely rapid course to a fatal termination. The Jew, on the other hand, among whose race tuberculosis has been present for many centuries, resists the disease well, and though frequently of frail physique often makes a recovery under adverse conditions. The Irish, on the other hand, do not resist tuberculosis well, while the Italians do.

Q. How many birds are there to an acre in the United States? H. M. B.

Q. What are some of the uses of excelsior and where did it originate? A. C. B.

A. The Forest Service says that excelsior has been manufactured in the United States more than fifty years. The name of excelsior originated in America, and the first machine was made here. Later the product and the method of manufacture were greatly improved by Europeans and today in France we find excelsior used for a great variety of purposes. They not only use it for packing, mattresses and upholstering, but also as a substitute for absorbent lint used in surgery, for filtration purposes, and to a limited extent for woven floor coverings. In the United States excelsior is used for packing glass, earthenware, and many other commodities. It is also employed in mattress making, upholstery, including furniture and carriages, as kennel and stable bedding, for decorative purposes in shop windows, and for stuffing dolls and toy animals.

Q. What is the minimum age for employment in the special delivery section of the United States Postoffice Department? G. T.

A. Twenty-one years is the minimum age.

Q. How long did Robert Frost write before he became famous? D. D. B.

A. The American poet, Robert Frost, wrote for 20 years before his work became known. "A Boy's Will," first published in England in 1913 was the first work really to attract attention.

Q. What occasioned the death of the second wife of Longfellow? Q. D.

A. In 1861, Mrs. Longfellow was one day playing with her children, amusing them, by sealing up bits of their curls in tiny packages. From the burning wax, Mrs. Longfellow's dress caught fire. Her death occurred a few hours later.

Q. How are the bells operated at railroad crossings? I. C. T.

A. The bell signal used at railroad crossings is electrically operated by the train. The train completes a circuit which is caused by the train moving over the track in that particular section in which the bell is installed. The train usually completes its circuit 1500 feet before coming to the crossing.

NEWS NOTES FROM MOVIELAND

By Daisy Dean

Dainty little Madge Bellamy has just been signed for the title role in a new Schulberg production entitled "Paradise." And the "well known and justly celebrated" Bert Lytell is to play opposite her.

Madge is used to playing opposite the well known male stars. While her film experience has not been very long—measured by years—we seem to recall that most of the pictures in which she has been seen are pretty well remembered. Do you remember that it was Madge who played opposite Douglas McLean in his classic—"The Hottentot?" This film was made pretty early in the young lady's career, and the number of times one sees her name in the electrics nowadays speaks columes for her popularity.

In passing we might mention that the deminutive star is a native of Texas, Hillsboro, in the lone star state, being her native city. She had some experience on the legitimate stage before going into pictures. Her first important screen work was in "Lorna Doone," and a dainty Mistress Lorna she made. Then followed "Cup of Life," "Hail the Woman," "The Hottentot" (mentioned before), "Soul of the Best," "Lost" and "Tinsel Harvest."

She is the heroine of Fox's romance of railroad history, "The Iron Horse," and does an excellent piece of work in it. In most of her most recent pictures Madge has alternated James Kirkwood and Herbert Rawlinson for her co-stars. "Secrets of the Night," "The Fightin' Cop," "The Flower of Napoli," "A Fool and his Money," "The Nightcap" and "The Man in Blue," are her latest releases, so you can see there have not been many idle moments lately in Madge's fair young life.

Dainty Madge Bellamy, heroine of "The Iron Horse," has been signed for the title role in Schulberg's "Parasites." Bert Lytell will play opposite her.

Alma Rubens is playing the lead in "The Eyes of A Fool," a Universal Jewell. She is also giving her advice concerning the religious scenes in the picture. Alma was graduated from the Sacred Heart Convent in San Francisco and understands those things.

WIT AND HUMOR FROM ENGLAND

Some have been thought brave because they were afraid to run away.

The poisiest drum has nothing in it but air.

The first breath is the beginning of death.

English proverbs make up today's installment (No. nine) of this series:

There is nothing new except what hath been forgotten.

He that goes a great way for a wife is either cheated or means to cheat.

He that hath no children doth bring them up well.

He that is needy when he is married shall be rich when he is buried.

Commend not your wife, wine nor house.

A cool mouth and warm feet live long.

Pride is as loud a beggar as Want, and a great deal more saucy.

The thief is sorry that he is caught, not that he is a thief.

Who would do ill never wants occasion.

Girls are like birds, and the breed comes out in the feathers.

Venezula has finally consented to the use of radio receiving sets in that country.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORMS URGED ON CONGRESS

League Will Also Work to Have Seven States Act.

CAPITAL MEET

Three Recommendations Made at Opening of Session.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The effort of Civil Service reform organizations is being concentrated during the present season of Congress behind three principal legislative measures, according to the report submitted by the Council of the National Civil Service Reform league at the opening session today of the league's forty-fourth annual convention. These measures are:

(1) The Frazier bill for the application of the merit system of appointment by law, as recommended by President Coolidge in his annual message, to first, second and third class postmasters. There are 14,788 of these officers in the postal service.

(2) The Cranton bill providing competitive examinations for prohibition agents. This legislation was passed by the House at the last session and was recommend by the President in his message. Prohibition agents were exempted by the Volstead Act from the requirements of the Civil Service law.

(3) The Lehlbach bill, passed by the House at the last session, abolishing the Personnel Classification Board and transferring its functions to the Civil Service Commission, in the interest of economy and improved personnel administration. The Council's report recommends that all personnel functions, except those belonging to the President, and the heads of departments, be centralized in the Civil Service Commission.

The effort of the field division of the league during the next year, the report announced, will be concentrated in seven States, which are at present without State Civil Service laws. They are Pennsylvania, Texas, Minnesota, Kansas, Vermont, Utah, Minnesota, Kansas, Vermont, Utah and Michigan. "In addition to these States," the report adds, "conditions are gradually forming so as to indicate ultimate favorable consideration of State Civil Service laws in Nebraska, Georgia, Alabama, Kentucky and Virginia."

During the past year, the report announces, letters have been sent by the National Civil Service Reform League to all members of the Republican and Democratic National Committees submitting resolutions substantially identical in character by the adoption of which either party would challenge the other to join in a public pledge to uphold and abide by the merit system, in letter and in spirit.

"Three-fourths of the replies received by committeemen of both parties state that they would support such a resolution as was proposed by the league at the next meeting of their respective committees. Only two of the communications from national committeemen expressed opposition to the merit principle.

"Much is said of the uselessness of the pledge and platforms adopted by political organizations. However not many years ago a similar inquiry addressed to members of the national committees of both organizations would undoubtedly have resulted in as many statements in denunciation of the Civil Service system as were received this year in endorsement of it."

The practice of the Post Office Department in submitting eligible lists for Presidential postmasters fourth-class postmasters and rural carriers to Congressmen for their recommendation of the candidates to be appointed is vigorously condemned in the council's report. The "deplorable conditions in the postal service" resulting from this practice have been called to the attention of the President by the league on five separate occasions, the report adds.

"In this correspondence the league has maintained that the Post Office Department has actually removed employes in the classified Civil Service for the apparent purpose of making a vacancy to which a Republican might be appointed.

"It is well understood that the appointments of postmasters and rural carriers as made under the present practice of the Post Office Department are largely political in character. The league condemning the practice of referring the eligible lists to Members of Congress and reiterates its former recommendation that the President provide by executive order or otherwise that the Post Office Department in making selections choose the first person on the eligible list in every case. In this way only can the present practice be effectively checked."

"There's a difference in bread." Always ask for BETSY ROSS by name.

Ohio Wesleyan Has World's Third Largest Telescope

Prof. Perkins, Whose Highest Salary Was $1,800, Makes $260,000 Gift to Institution.

DELAWARE.—Perkins Observatory, at Ohio Wesleyan university here, with its sixty-one-inch reflecting telescope, the third largest in the world, is now complete save for the installation of the temporary mirror of the instrument, which is to be loaned by Harvard College Observatory. The Perkins instrument is the largest reflecting telescope in existence, aside from the two giant reflectors on the Pacific Coast, at Mount Wilson, and the Dominion Observatory, at Victoria, B. C.

The telescope mounting, weighing thirty-seven tons, has been placed on its 460-ton concrete base. The dome under which the telescope is housed is completed even to its movable top, which contains 168 tons of steel.

The telescope contains 6,850 parts, varying in weight from .006 of an ounce to 6,700 pounds. The permanent mirror, which, when completed, will replace the one temporarily loaned by Harvard, is to be sixty-one inches in diameter, nine inches thick and will weigh 2,700 pounds.

The giant dimensions of the telescope make possible an instrument of wonderful power, and astronomers estimate that through it more than a billion stars will be visible. The naked human eye cannot see stars beyond those of the sixth magnitude, but the Perkins telescope will make visible stars of the eighteenth magnitude and make possible photographic records of the images of those of the nineteenth and possibly, the twentieth magnitudes.

The hugh telescope and the observatory are the conception and the gift to Ohio Wesleyan of the late Professor and Mrs. Hiram M. Perkins, of this city. Professor Perkins taught mathematics and astronomy in the university for fifty years.

Believing that "astronomy is the queen of the sciences" and that "there is nothing that will give young people such a conception of the greatness and power and beauty of the Creator as the study of the infinite bodies that fill the heavens." Professor Perkins gave the savings of his lifetime to make possible the great telescope. His gift of some $260,000 for this purpose is the more remarkable in view of the fact that the highest salary he ever received was $1,800 a year.

Unique terms of the gift covering the use to which the instrument is to be put provide that it is first to be used for the instruction of the students of the university; second, to be turned over to the public at regular intervals for the inspiration and instruction of the common citizens; and only after that is it to be employed for research.

So massive were individual pieces of the telescope and so heavy the materials required for it that Ohio Wesleyan officials had bridges tested to see if they could stand the strain of having these great weights carried across them before determining the location for the new observatory. The site of the observatory is closely encircled by the beautiful rolling grounds of the Odevene Country Club golf course, which is sponsored in part by Ohio Wesleyan.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORMS URGED ON CONGRESS

League Will Also Work to Have Seven States Act.

Three Recommendations Made at Opening of Session.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The effort of Civil Service reform organizations is being concentrated during the present season of Congress behind three principal legislative measures, according to the report submitted by the Council of the National Civil Service Reform league at the opening session today of the league's forty-fourth annual convention. These measures are:

(1) The Frazier bill for the application of the merit system of appointment by law, as recommended by President Coolidge in his annual message, to first, second and third class postmasters. There are 14,788 of these officers in the postal service.

(2) The Cranton bill providing competitive examinations for prohibition agents. This legislation was passed by the House at the last session and was recommend by the President in his message. Prohibition agents were exempted by the Volstead Act from the requirements of the Civil Service law.

(3) The Lehlbach bill, passed by the House at the last session, abolishing the Personnel Classification Board and transferring its functions to the Civil Service Commission, in the interest of economy and improved personnel administration. The Council's report recommends that all personnel functions, except those belonging to the President, and the heads of departments, be centralized in the Civil Service Commission.

The effort of the field division of the league during the next year, the report announced, will be concentrated in seven States, which are at present without State Civil Service laws. They are Pennsylvania, Texas, Minnesota, Kansas, Vermont, Utah, Minnesota, Kansas, Vermont, Utah and Michigan. "In addition to these States," the report adds, "conditions are gradually forming so as to indicate ultimate favorable consideration of State Civil Service laws in Nebraska, Georgia, Alabama, Kentucky and Virginia."

During the past year, the report announces, letters have been sent by the National Civil Service Reform League to all members of the Republican and Democratic National Committees submitting resolutions substantially identical in character by the adoption of which either party would challenge the other to join in a public pledge to uphold and abide by the merit system, in letter and in spirit.

"Three-fourths of the replies received by committeemen of both parties state that they would support such a resolution as was proposed by the league at the next meeting of their respective committees. Only two of the communications from national committeemen expressed opposition to the merit principle.

"Much is said of the uselessness of the pledge and platforms adopted by political organizations. However not many years ago a similar inquiry addressed to members of the national committees of both organizations would undoubtedly have resulted in as many statements in denunciation of the Civil Service system as were received this year in endorsement of it."

The practice of the Post Office Department in submitting eligible lists for Presidential postmasters fourth-class postmasters and rural carriers to Congressmen for their recommendation of the candidates to be appointed is vigorously condemned in the council's report. The "deplorable conditions in the postal service" resulting from this practice have been called to the attention of the President by the league on five separate occasions, the report adds.

"In this correspondence the league has maintained that the Post Office Department has actually removed employes in the classified Civil Service for the apparent purpose of making a vacancy to which a Republican might be appointed.

"It is well understood that the appointments of postmasters and rural carriers as made under the present practice of the Post Office Department are largely political in character. The league condemning the practice of referring the eligible lists to Members of Congress and reiterates its former recommendation that the President provide by executive order or otherwise that the Post Office Department in making selections choose the first person on the eligible list in every case. In this way only can the present practice be effectively checked."

"There's a difference in bread." Always ask for BETSY ROSS by name.

Ohio Wesleyan Has World's Third Largest Telescope

Prof. Perkins, Whose Highest Salary Was $1,800, Makes $260,000 Gift to Institution.

DELAWARE.—Perkins Observatory, at Ohio Wesleyan university here, with its sixty-one-inch reflecting telescope, the third largest in the world, is now complete save for the installation of the temporary mirror of the instrument, which is to be loaned by Harvard College Observatory. The Perkins instrument is the largest reflecting telescope in existence, aside from the two giant reflectors on the Pacific Coast, at Mount Wilson, and the Dominion Observatory, at Victoria, B. C.

The telescope mounting, weighing thirty-seven tons, has been placed on its 460-ton concrete base. The dome under which the telescope is housed is completed even to its movable top, which contains 168 tons of steel.

The telescope contains 6,850 parts, varying in weight from .006 of an ounce to 6,700 pounds. The permanent mirror, which, when completed, will replace the one temporarily loaned by Harvard, is to be sixty-one inches in diameter, nine inches thick and will weigh 2,700 pounds.

The giant dimensions of the telescope make possible an instrument of wonderful power, and astronomers estimate that through it more than a billion stars will be visible. The naked human eye cannot see stars beyond those of the sixth magnitude, but the Perkins telescope will make visible stars of the eighteenth magnitude and make possible photographic records of the images of those of the nineteenth and possibly, the twentieth magnitudes.

The hugh telescope and the observatory are the conception and the gift to Ohio Wesleyan of the late Professor and Mrs. Hiram M. Perkins, of this city. Professor Perkins taught mathematics and astronomy in the university for fifty years.

Believing that "astronomy is the queen of the sciences" and that "there is nothing that will give young people such a conception of the greatness and power and beauty of the Creator as the study of the infinite bodies that fill the heavens," Professor Perkins gave the savings of his lifetime to make possible the great telescope. His gift of some $260,000 for this purpose is the more remarkable in view of the fact that the highest salary he ever received was $1,800 a year.

Unique terms of the gift covering the use to which the instrument is to be put provide that it is first to be used for the instruction of the students of the university; second, to be turned over to the public at regular intervals for the inspiration and instruction of the common citizens; and only after that is it to be employed for research.

So massive were individual pieces of the telescope and so heavy the materials required for it that Ohio Wesleyan officials had bridges tested to see if they could stand the strain of having these great weights carried across them before determining the location for the new observatory. The site of the observatory is closely encircled by the beautiful rolling grounds of the Odevene Country Club golf course, which is sponsored in part by Ohio Wesleyan.

World's Biggest Officer, 692 Pounds, Dead In Texas Home

"Big Boy" Harris' Boast Was That he Was as Strong as he Was Big.

FORT WORTH, Texas, Dec. 16.—Sam (Big Boy) Harris, the "world's biggest constable," is dead.

But there survive many reminiscences that will remain legends in his home town of Farmersville, Texas.

Fifty-two years old and weighing almost 700 pounds—692 to be exact—Sam was borne to his grave on a motor truck, encased in the largest coffin ever constructed. It aggregated, with his remains, a combined weight of 1,518 pounds. The great casket could have accommodated four men of normal stature.

Sam was memorable for his boast that "he was as strong as he was large." His favorite declaration was that he could "lift anything loose on both ends."

In his career as city marshal his great size and strength often proved a source of economy to the city. These assets precluded the necessity of purchasing a patrol. It was recalled that on one occasion he carried three muchly inebriated men a distance of over a mile to the city bastile.

Then again his office duties included the task of aiding the village fire department. When the state bank burned Sam, single-handed, pushed the huge one-ton safe from the building, but it took two horses to return it to the new temporary offices the next day.

He never slept in a bed. Nobody ever made one that would rest his huge frame. He reclined on the floors. Sam had a pleasure car, too. It was a ton truck with the old family coach securely fastened to the floor of the body. With a canopy over his head the big constable made his trips to surrounding communities reposing on the couch while his deputies coaxed the truck into action.

His meals were the feature attraction of the town. Sam could and did consume more food at one "sitting" than any other six men in Farmersville. In the pre-Volstead era he complained local spirit emporiums never kept enough cold beer on hand to fill him up.

His recent visit to New York as a delegate to the Woodmen of the World convention proved a sensation. The emblematic ax that he carried could not have been lifted by the average man.

Perhaps the most thorough idea of his enormous size can be gained from the measurements he once supplied a mail order house, height 6 feet two inches, waist 78 inches, chest 70 inches, hips 84 inches, thigh 52 inches, calf 30 inches, collar 24 inches.

The mail order tailors were convinced Sam had overestimated his figure and made him a suit, although big enough for two average men, was yet too small for the constable. He sent it back with the note that he had ordered a "man's size suit, and when he wanted one for his youngest boy he would specify as much."

He was survived by eight children, four boys whose combined weight totaled 729 pounds, four girls aggregating 686 pounds, and his wife, who tipped the scales at 190.

Police Move Tower Gazers Who Block New York Traffic

NEW YORK—A little group of office workers idling away their luncheon hour on lower Broadway halted and pointed to the tall tower of the Woolworth Building, fifty-two stories above the sidewalk.

They discussed the recent announcement that Cass Gilbert, architect of the building, would make tests in the first gale to ascertain whether the tower swayed in the wind.

The group pointing upward was enough to start a luncheon hour traffic jam in Broadway. Everybody stopped and tried to discover a plumbline said to be hanging from the tower. There was none.

Police reserves had to be called to keep the spectators moving.

World's Biggest Otticer, 692 Pounds, Dead In Texas Home

"Big Boy" Harris' Boast Was That he Was as Strong as he Was Big.

But there survive many reminiscences that will remain legends in his home town of Farmersville, Texas.

Fifty-two years old and weighing almost 700 pounds—692 to be exact—Sam was borne to his grave on a motor truck, encased in the largest coffin ever constructed. It aggregated, with his remains, a combined weight of 1,518 pounds. The great casket could have accommodated four men of normal stature.

Sam was memorable for his boast that "he was as strong as he was large." His favorite declaration was that he could "lift anything loose on both ends."

In his career as city marshal his great size and strength often proved a source of economy to the city. These assets precluded the necessity of purchasing a patrol. It was recalled that on one occasion he carried three muchly inebriated men a distance of over a mile to the city bastile.

Then again his office duties included the task of aiding the village fire department. When the state bank burned Sam, single-handed, pushed the huge one-ton safe from the building, but it took two horses to return it to the new temporary offices the next day.

He never slept in a bed. Nobody ever made one that would rest his huge frame. He reclined on the floor. Sam had a pleasure car, too. It was a ton truck with the old family coach securely fastened to the floor of the body. With a canopy over his head the big constable made his trips to surrounding communities reposing on the couch while his deputies coaxed the truck into action.

His meals were the feature attraction of the town. Sam could and did consume more food at one "sitting" than any other six men in Farmersville. In the pre-Volstead era he complained local spirit emporiums never kept enough cold beer on hand to fill him up.

His recent visit to New York as a delegate to the Woodmen of the World convention proved a sensation. The emblematic ax that he carried could not have been lifted by the average man.

Perhaps the most thorough idea of his enormous size can be gained from the measurements he once supplied a mail order house, height 6 feet two inches, waist 78 inches, chest 70 inches, hips 84 inches, thigh 52 inches, calf 30 inches, collar 24 inches.

The mail order tailors were convinced Sam had overestimated his figure and made him a suit, although big enough for two average men, was yet too small for the constable. He sent it back with the note that he had ordered a "man's size suit, and when he wanted one for his youngest boy he would specify as much."

He was survived by eight children, four boys whose combined weight totaled 720 pounds, four girls aggregating 686 pounds, and his wife, who tipped the scales at 190.

New Treatment For Inflamed Tonsils

Why bother with slow acting remedies that may and may not help those tender inflamed tonsils when two or three gargles with Kojene before you go to bed at night will reduce the inflammation, destroy any and every germ and cause the soreness to go before morning.

If by any mishap Kojene doesn't do this, Carnahan's Drug Store, Jesse D. Holloway, Mathews Original Cut Rate or any progressive druggist anywhere will gladly return the 60 cents you pay for a six ounce bottle.

Read the directions for sore throat and tosilitis as Kojene, the world's most powerful antiseptic, should be diluted to obtain quick results. Kojene is non-poisonous—you can drink it if you want to.

Police Move Tower Gazers Who Block New York Traffic

NEW YORK—A little group of office workers idling away their luncheon hour on lower Broadway halted and pointed to the tall tower of the Woolworth Building, fifty-two stories above the sidewalk.

They discussed the recent announcement that Cass Gilbert, architect of the building, would make tests in the first gale to ascertain whether the tower swayed in the wind.

The group pointing upward was enough to start a luncheon hour traffic jam in Broadway. Everybody stopped and tried to discover a plumbline said to be hanging from the tower. There was none.

Police reserves had to be called to keep the spectators moving.

TANGLED CASE WILL BE HEARD

Unusual Divorce Action Filed by Palestine Resident.

When the divorce case of Anthony Holloway, of East Palestine, against his wife, Pearl Holloway, is called for trial in common pleas court, an unusual story will be related.

Holloway is a colored employe of the National Fireproofing company, of East Palestine. His wife died a year or so ago.

His brother was in Philadelphia. He met a woman, the mother of several children, and she was a native of Hillsboro, Ga. The brother of Anthony "fixed" it so that Anthony and the Philadelphia woman would marry. Anthony was so informed of the "find."

Anthony had never looked upon the face of the colored woman in Philadelphia, but he said "it's all right," and he arranged to secure a marriage license.

Holloway and a sister-in-law, who also resides in East Palestine, came to Lisbon and the sister-in-law represented to the court that she was the one who was to become the bride of Anthony, when in fact she was not.

The marriage license and carfare from Philadelphia to East Palestine was forwarded to the "other woman" and in a few days she arrived with her children at East Palestine.

Then there was a wedding.

The wife went to Lisbon and filed a charge of non-support against Anthony. He was arrested, it was then learned that the woman was possessed of a husband "somewhere," as she put it. He had committed bigamy. She was sent back to her home in Georgia, and a few days later Anthony and his sister-in-law were arrested again, but this time on a charge of perjury, and a suspended sentence was given both by Judge James G. Moore.

Holloway now wants his record cleared, and through his counsel, J. D. Baunecht, of East Palestine, he has filed a petition for divorce.

It will be a non-contested cause.

West Township Road Will be Resurfaced During 1925 Season

That the East Rochester and North Georgetown road in West township will be surfaced during 1925 seems assured, following a conference between the county commissioners and the trustees of West township Monday.

This road was graded several years ago, but the county has not had sufficient funds available to go ahead with its part of the surfacing. It is now agreed, however, that should West township be in a position to place its share of the cost of the road in the hands of the county auditor, the county will do likewise, and the contract for the surfacing advertised.

The improvement will extend north from the Lincoln highway to the West-Knox township lines. It has been proposed to surface this road with either concrete or paving block, the latter being similar to that used on the Lincoln highway in Center township west of Lisbon.

MANY APPLICANTS FOR PASTORATE

At the morning service of the congregation of the Lisbon Christian church Sunday the application of the Rev. Allen T. Shaw, of Marion, to succeed the Rev. P. M. Kendall, as pastor of this church, was rejected.

Mr. Kendall retires as pastor of this church January 1 to become pastor of the First Christian church of Medina. It is not likely any of the other 15 candidates for the charge will be heard until after Mr. Kendall has returned from service in Lisbon.

LEWIS APPOINTED HEALTH OFFICER

At a meeting of the County Board of Health held in Lisbon Monday night, Sheriff Gomer Lewis, whose term of office expires December 31 next, was elected county health officer, vice Fagan Price.

There were three applicants for the position, Mr. Lewis, Mr. Price and Clarence Turner.

The board also re-elected Dr. T. T. Church of Salem as county health commissioner and Miss Louise Steele as county nurse.

Mr. Price who has been serving as health and sanitary officer for the county came here from Meigs county when Dr. McCullough was county health commissioner.

Sues to Recover.

Through his counsel, Jesse K. George, of Steubenville, W. A. Calhoun has filed an action in common pleas court against P. V. Mackall to recover judgment on a promissory note for $500 as a part of a note for $3,000 upon which accommodation endorsers were J. M. Manor, W. G. Jackson, F. M. Leasure, G. S. Thompson and also the plaintiff and defendant. The major note was paid by Mr. Thompson, the petition recites.

NEW FARM AGENT TO LOCATE HERE

Floyd Lower, recently appointed county agent to succeed County Agent Clarence E. Rowland, expects to locate in Lisbon next week. Mr. Lower was in Lisbon this week seeking a residence.

Mr. Rowland will retire from the Columbiana County Farm Bureau Wednesday of next week and a few days later will take charge of the office of the Lorain County Farm Bureau, with headquarters in Elyria.

Lower has been county agent of Carroll county for some years, and has been residing at New Paris on the Minerva-Canton road.

FOUR APPLICANTS FOR CITIZENSHIP

Four applications for first citizenship papers have been recorded by Clerk of Courts John T. Burns as follows:

NEW LIVE STOCK CONCERN PLANNED

Stockholders of the Columbiana Live Stock company will meet in Lisbon at 1 o'clock the afternoon of January 13 for the purpose of surrendering their charter and to form a new live stock shipping company upon broader lines than the present charter permits.

The call for the meeting has been issued by Secretary J. I. Fitzsimmons.

XMAS SEAL SALES RECEIPTS CLIMB

Receipts from the sale of Christmas seals in Lisbon give early evidence that the records of former years will be exceeded. The campaign in Lisbon this year is in charge of Mrs. May Pritchard. Reports from all parts of the county where seals are being sold under the direction of the Columbiana County Public Health League are expected to be announced by County Secretary George Lafferty within the next three weeks.

TANGLED CASE WILL BE HEARD

Unusual Divorce Action Filed by Palestine Resident.

When the divorce case of Anthony Holloway, of East Palestine, against his wife, Pearl Holloway, is called for trial in common pleas court, an unusual story will be related.

Holloway is a colored employe of the National Fireproofing company, of East Palestine. His wife died a year or so ago.

His brother was in Philadelphia. He met a woman, the mother of several children, and she was a native of Hillsboro, Ga. The brother of Anthony "fixed" it so that Anthony and the Philadelphia woman would marry. Anthony was so informed of the "find."

Anthony had never looked upon the face of the colored woman in Philadelphia, but he said "it's all right," and he arranged to secure a marriage license.

Holloway and a sister-in-law, who also resides in East Palestine, came to Lisbon and the sister-in-law represented to the court that she was the one who was to become the bride of Anthony, when in fact she was not.

The marriage license and carfare from Philadelphia to East Palestine was forwarded to the "other woman" and in a few days she arrived with her children at East Palestine.

Then there was a wedding.

The wife went to Lisbon and filed a charge of non-support against Anthony. He was arrested. It was then learned that the woman was possessed of a husband "somewhere," as she put it. He had committed bigamy. She was sent back to her home in Georgia, and a few days later Anthony and his sister-in-law were arrested again, but this time on a charge of perjury, and a suspended sentence was given both by Judge James G. Moore.

Holloway now wants his record cleared, and through his counsel, J. D. Baunecht, of East Palestine, he has filed a petition for divorce.

It will be a non-contested cause.

West Township Road Will be Resurfaced During 1925 Season

That the East Rochester and North Georgetown road in West township will be surfaced during 1925 seems assured, following a conference between the county commissioners and the trustees of West township Monday.

This road was graded several years ago, but the county has not had sufficient funds available to go ahead with its part of the surfacing. It is now agreed, however, that should West township be in a position to place its share of the cost of the road in the hands of the county auditor, the county will do likewise, and the contract for the surfacing advertised.

The improvement will extend north from the Lincoln highway to the West-Knox township lines. It has been proposed to surface this road with either concrete or paving block, the latter being similar to that used on the Lincoln highway in Center township west of Lisbon.

TANGLED CASE WILL BE HEARD

Unusual Divorce Action Filed by Palestine Resident.

When the divorce case of Anthony Holloway, of East Palestine, against his wife, Pearl Holloway, is called for trial in common pleas court, an unusual story will be related.

Holloway is a colored employe of the National Fireproofing company, of East Palestine. His wife died a year or so ago.

His brother was in Philadelphia. He met a woman, the mother of several children, and she was a native of Hillsboro, Ga. The brother of Anthony "fixed" it so that Anthony and the Philadelphia woman would marry. Anthony was so informed of the "find."

Anthony had never looked upon the face of the colored woman in Philadelphia, but he said "it's all right," and he arranged to secure a marriage license.

Holloway and a sister-in-law, who also resides in East Palestine, came to Lisbon and the sister-in-law represented to the court that she was the one who was to become the bride of Anthony, when in fact she was not.

The marriage license and carfare from Philadelphia to East Palestine was forwarded to the "other woman" and in a few days she arrived with her children at East Palestine.

Then there was a wedding.

The wife went to Lisbon and filed a charge of non-support against Anthony. He was arrested. It was then learned that the woman was possessed of a husband "somewhere," as she put it. He had committed bigamy. She was sent back to her home in Georgia, and a few days later Anthony and his sister-in-law were arrested again, but this time on a charge of perjury, and a suspended sentence was given both by Judge James G. Moore.

Holloway now wants his record cleared, and through his counsel, J. D. Baunecht, of East Palestine, he has filed a petition for divorce.

It will be a non-contested cause.

West Township Road Will be Resurfaced During 1925 Season

That the East Rochester and North Georgetown road in West township will be surfaced during 1925 seems assured, following a conference between the county commissioners and the trustees of West township Monday.

This road was graded several years ago, but the county has not had sufficient funds available to go ahead with its part of the surfacing. It is now agreed, however, that should West township be in a position to place its share of the cost of the road in the hands of the county auditor, the county will do likewise, and the contract for the surfacing advertised.

The improvement will extend north from the Lincoln highway to the West-Knox township lines. It has been proposed to surface this road with either concrete or paving block, the latter being similar to that used on the Lincoln highway in Center township west of Lisbon.

MANY APPLICANTS FOR PASTORATE

Sues to Recover.

Thompson and also the plaintiff and defendant. The major note was paid by Mr. Thompson, the petition recites.

Gingerbread—One egg, one-fourth cup butter and shortening (half and half,) one-half cup sugar, one-half cup molasses, one-half cup boiling water, one-half tablespoon ginger, one and one-half cup flour. Put beaten egg, sugar and moltsses into bowl Add fat and boiling water which has been poured over soda and ginger. Immediately sift flour into this. Beat until smooth, and pour into well greased pan. This will be a thin mixture. Bake in a moderate oven 30 minutes.

Breakfast fruit has become a necessity for most families Prunes, baked apples or apple sauce or any stewed fruit may be used, but fresh fruit is preferable. Grapefruits halved, the center and seeds removed and the pulp loosened is always welcome and may be sweetened to suit the individual taste. Oranges may be simply halved and eaten with an orange spoon or may be peeled and sliced alone or with bananas Grapes, bannanas, apples and ripe pears, in season are all healthful and delicious fruits with which to start the morning meal.

Potato Puffs—One and one-half cups cold mashed potatoes, one egg, salt to taste, one-fourth cup flour, one teaspoon baking powder. Put potatoes through ricer. Add egg and salt. Sift in the flour until you have mixture about like a drop batter. Sift in baking powder and drop by spoonful into hot fat. When a golden brown place on brown paper. Serve hot.

Sour Cream Salad Dressing—Three tablespoons flour, two tablespoons sugar, one egg, one teaspoon mustard, one teaspoon salt, three-fourths cup of sour cream, one-forth cup vinegar. Mix dry ingredients to smooth paste with little cream. Add egg and remainder of cream. Cook in top of double boiler until it thickens. Add vinegar. Continue to cook a few minutes.

Ice Box Cake—Two squares German sweet chocolate, three tablespoons hot water, three eggs, one teaspoon vanilla, small baker's sponge cake. Water, sugar, egg yolks, into top double boiler. Stir until smooth. Beat whites until stiff. Pour hot mixture into them, beating all the time. Split cake and place half of mixture between halves, other half on top. Allow to stand in ice box over night. Serve with one-half pint cream, whipped.

Vegetable Soup—Gather up the bones and scraps left from the Sunday roast or chops, and any leftover meat gravy, cover with cold water and cook slowly for an hour or so. Strain and set aside to cool. Burn Grasshoppers at Night

The grasshopper pest appears in the wheat sections ever so often and the Kansas State Agricultural College has called to the attention of the farmers, that the hoppers roost at night on weeds along the edge of the fields and that one of the most effective ways of getting rid of them is to burn the weeds at night. The entomologists say that if the grasshoppers can be held down long enough for the second leaf of the wheat plant to get under way they will not likely do much damage.

Gingerbread—One egg, one-fourth cup butter and shortening (half and half,) one-half cup sugar, one-half cup molasses, one-half cup boiling water, one-half tablespoon ginger, one and one-half cup flour. Put beaten egg, sugar and molasses into bowl Add fat and boiling water which has been poured over soda and ginger. Immediately sift flour into this. Beat until smooth, and pour into well greased pan. This will be a thin mixture. Bake in a moderate oven 30 minutes.

Breakfast fruit has become a necessity for most families Prunes, baked apples or apple sauce or any stewed fruit may be used, but fresh fruit is preferable. Grapefruits halved, the center and seeds removed and the pulp loosened is always welcome and may be sweetened to suit the individual taste. Oranges may be simply halved and eaten with an orange spoon or may be peeled and sliced alone or with bananas Grapes, bannanas, apples and ripe pears, in season are all healthful and delicious fruits with which to start the morning meal.

Potato Puffs—One and one-half cups cold mashed potatoes, one egg, salt to taste, one-fourth cup flour, one teaspoon baking powder. Put potatoes through ricer. Add egg and salt. Sift in the flour until you have mixture about like a drop batter. Sift in baking powder and drop by spoonful into hot fat. When a golden brown place on brown paper. Serve hot.

Sour Cream Salad Dressing—Three tablespoons flour, two tablespoons sugar, one egg, one teaspoon mustard, one teaspoon salt, three-fourths cup of sour cream, one-forth cup vinegar. Mix dry ingredients to smooth paste with little cream. Add egg and remainder of cream. Cook in top of double boiler until it thickens. Add vinegar. Continue to cook a few minutes

Ice Box Cake—Two squares German sweet chocolate, three tablespoons hot water, three eggs, one teaspoon vanilla, small baker's sponge cake. Water, sugar, egg yolks, into top double boiler. Stir until smooth. Beat whites until stiff. Pour hot mixture into them, beating all the time. Split cake and place half of mixture between halves, other half on top. Allow to stand in ice box over night. Serve with one-half pint cream, whipped.

Vegetable Soup—Gather up the bones and scraps left from the Sunday roast or chops, and any leftover meat gravy, cover with cold water and cook slowly for an hour or so. Strain and set aside to cool. Remove fat, reheat and add as many vegetables as you like—carrots, onions, celery, turnips, tomatoes, potatoes, beans, peas, etc. Cut them in small pieces and cook until tender. # THE DOUBLE HOUSE

By Elizabeth Dejeans

Karesia was silent; so it was her home he had wanted from the beginning. She thought of her treasures, of the mellow-tinted Japanese paintings; she recalled the exquisite ceremonial of presentation, the two treasures brought from the imperial godown and unrolled before her; the room in which she had sat Japanese fashion, the dwarf pine visible through the half-drawn sogi. . . . And the turbaned Hindu in his little shop, unfolding the sand-encrusted dhurries for her inspection; the smell of the Ganges. "They are woven upon the sand," he had told her. Afterwards, on the river banks, she had seen the women weaving in reds and blues and dull yellows. . . . And the gravely amused man beside her who had prodded the rugs with his cane—his voice—"Take them, if you like them, Karesia——" Memories! Memories! The room she had built for her memories! . . . But she was so desperately lonely!

"You do not want, then, to rent the unfurnished side of my house?" she asked in a voice that she strove to keep steady. She had felt so uncertain that he would take the house; she had felt excitedly happy.

"No. It is not adapted to my needs." His air was final.

"I do not want to rent my home," Karesia said bleakly, then caught at the reasonable excuse. "I should have to furnish the house—I can't do that."

"It would not be necessary," Dascome sa'd in the same quiet, determined way. "I don't like to keep you standing—may I come in while I explain?"

He opened the door for her and she went on to the center of the room where, unconsciously, she took hold of the back of a chair. There was such a resolute force about the man; Karesia had the strange feeling that the place belonged to him already. She felt vaguely bewildered because it had come to her so suddenly and with such certainty that, if he went, she would suffer; that she wanted him in her house, next door to her. In a very passion of loneliness she had erected that sign, and her paryer had been answered so quickly and happily; throughout their interview she had been inwardly quivering with excitement over the curiously quick answer; a presence that was satisfying, comforting, interesting. If she refused him, he would go, and she might never see him again. . . . She waited in silence.

Dascome told her, in the same even, firm way: "I want exactly what I have found here—an artistic home ready for occupancy, garage convenience and separate quarters for my Japanese boy. To me, this room with those two beautiful Japanese paintings makes this house worth a double rental. I have here exactly what I want." He smiled his quick friendly smile. "You see, I am anxious that you shall not worry over what may seem to you an excessive rental. Besides, I realize that I am trying to take your home away from you."

Karesia had collected herself; she must look foolish standing there an image of distress. "I was so surprised at first, but I am landlady enough not to worry long over a good bargain," she asserted lightly. "I do not see, though, how I am to escape investing in furniture I don't want."

"You can use my furniture." He was still smiling.

"Your furniture."

"Yes. A carload of my household goods has just arrived. That is one reason I am looking for a furnished house—I haven't the courage to unpack that stuff and house-settle. I simply can't do it. With your permission, I shall lay that burden on your shoulders—another reason for paying you an adequate rent. You can overhaul that carload and choose whatever you want for your house. There is everything there—china, silver, linen and good furniture—take what you want of it, and the rest can be stored."

Again Karesia stared at him. "But—you don't want your own things about you?"

"No, I want your things about me."

She tried to understand; it was not dread of house-settling; it must be something more than that. Did he dislike his own belongings?

"The furniture is good," he assured her.

Karesia did not doubt it—much more valuable than hers. "I was trying to think—to imagine it," she said vaguely. Among other things she was thinking: "His things. It would be interesting—an insight into him."

"I shall pay for the hauling and——"

"You are paying enough already!" Karesia said decidedly.

"I shall pay for any expense there may be," he repeated firmly. "I shall have the things put in a storehouse and you can choose from them." He hesitated, then said with equal firmness, "I want to move in as soon as possible."

Karesia was brought face to face with it; Dascome saw her eyes go to the Japanese paintings, then drop to the rug beneath her feet. Her face quivered, then set. "It will take two days to get this house ready," she said with sudden decision. "This is Friday, you can come in on Sunday." She smiled bravely. "Both are my lucky days."

Dascome took a notebook from his pocket and wrote two addresses, then tore out the page and gave it to her. "My references," he said. "One of them is my banker." He smiled. "Rule one: Never sign a lease until you have investigated your prospective tenant." Then he brought out his pocketbook. "I want to pay a deposit and, of course, you can return it to me if you decide that I shall not make a good tenant. Any time you name tomorrow I shall be ready to sign the lease. I want, too, to bring my daughter to see the house—may I?"

Karesia took the two bills and felt that her voice was as pleasantly businesslike as his. "Yes, certainly. I will give you a receipt." She found pen and paper, began to write, then really looked at the bills. Not many men carry five-hundred-dollar bills about with them; Dascome saw her pause in surprise. But she wrote it. "Received from Mr. John Dascome, one thousand dollars." Over her name she hesitated, then wrote it in full—"Mrs. Sonya Karesia Kaime."

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS

BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Does Not Like Love Making.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: How can a girl tell whether she loves a boy or not. I have been going with a boy for fifteen months. He says he loves me and wants me to be engaged. I can't tell whether I love him. I do not want him to kiss me and it embarrasses me terribly when he asks. Would I tell this way if I loved him? When he lays his hands on me familiarly I almost hate him and feel like telling him I will never see him again. Would I feel like this if I loved him? How can I make him understand that I do not like this? I don't know how to tell him and sometimes think it would be the easiest way not to see him again without any explanation.

I have plenty of boy friends and some of them want to go with me. I don't dare tell my friend as he doesn't like to have me even ask to go.

Do all boys do things they shouldn't after they have gone with a girl for some time. Will they do this if they love and respect her?

LITTLE SENIOR.

It may be that you have been educated to feel that it is wrong to have a boy want to kiss and love you. In that case you will probably become less embarrassed and less distressed as time goes on, because most boys make such advances. Your boy friend has not done anything out of the way in asking for kisses, because it is so evident that he loves you and wants you to marry him. It is not right, however, for young men to ask for a girl's kisses and love without proposing marriage.

I hardly believe you love the young man who cares for you, because if you did you would probably want him to make love to you. Love is still so new to you that you cannot judge. Wait until you know in your heart what love is.

I think it would be better to tell your friend frankly that it embarrasses and distresses you to have him make love or touch you. When he realizes that you are sincere, he will not be so free.

Go with other boys too, because a girl in her high school years is too young to settle down with one person. Even if the boy you have been going with doesn't like it, he will have to get used to having you go with other boys too. Don't ask his permission in such a matter.

Fiance's Visits Stop.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl twenty-three and in love with a young man of twenty-four. He says he loves me dearly. I don't know what the matter is because he has not been over for some time and I don't even know if he is angry at me. The last time he was over we were the best of friends. We were going to be married a month from the time he stopped coming. Do you think he will ever come to see me or should I let him go? I surely do think a lot of this boy. I could not stand to give him up. My folks have thought a lot of him ever since I started going with him.

BROKEN HEARTED GIRL.

It looks very much as if the young man found he did not love you enough to marry you and he lacked courage to tell you. By staying away he is letting you see that he no longer cares. The thing for you to do is to face your disappointment bravely, showing much courage as the multitudes of others who are suffering from a broken heart but concealing the fact. Try not to suffer from humiliation and memories, but look for happiness in each day as it comes. If you meet this experience which has come into your life philosophically, not letting it dim your eyes to oother blessings, it will not be long before you are yourself again, fully recovered from your disappointment.

The Other Side.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: There are always two sides to a story. You printed one side to a story which has been very much misrepresented in most of its details. It told how parents owning a large farm and raising a good girl on it sent her through high school. In the fall they placed her in a business school. This much was correct. The story goes on that they paid her tuition and that an aunt and uncle persuaded her to leave school, got her a job and rented her a room at $2 a week, and moved her into their home sometime before her parents knew of it. A postscript was added that the girl, under age, was being forced to live in the home of consumptives.

The real story is this: When they placed her in the business school they placed her in a wealthy home where she could assist with the housework for her room and board. They paid ten weeks' tuition. At the end of four weeks her eyes gave out and she went home to her parents for almost a week. Besides they were disappointed in the school because she was doing work which she had already taken in high school. Upon investigation they were informed at the high school that she was already qualified for a position. She returned to the home she was in and found the room was wanted for another girl. It was then my niece came to my house. She was not able to get an office job because of no openings and because her parents failed to get her glasses. She took a a job clerking for $12 a week. Her parents, finding she was working, asked for $25 for wasted tuition. She returned that sum and bought the fall clothing which her parents failed to get her. By dong this she has not been able to give me one cent for the room and board. She was going home each week-end and when her father brought her back he talked to us apparently all right. As for consumption, it has been more than eight years since I had it. I was under close watch for a year and after that was well. The city board of health and also the state board dismissed my case seven years ago. Since then I have been able to do anything I cared to and for more than two years have managed a large apartment house in addition to the household duties for a family of six. During the time I was sick my sister, her husband and children visited me and ate meals here on the average of once a week. My sister is now trying to persuade her daughter to give up her work here and keep house for a widower with four children. The girl cries to me and says the shoes not want to do housework. She does not want to disobey her mother. Her parents threaten to give her $5 in their will if she does not submit to living with this man.

AUNT OF THE KIDNAPPED DAUGHTER.

Your niece might silently resist her parents, doing what she believes to be right. It will be hard for her to disobey, but if she knows in her own heart they are unjust in their demands that should comfort her. If legal action is taken by the parents to make her return to them, she ought to secure the services of an attorney to present her side of the case. Of course there is the danger that the parents will disinherit her as they threaten. If the estate is considerable or worth fighting for I would advise her to consult a lawyer at once. After he has investigated both sides of the case he will be able to advise her more satisfactorily than I would after hearing the two letters with their equally sincere appeals for help.

Husband is Irritable

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been married 14 years and have lived very happily until five years ago. My husband is seven years older than I and has become irritable and old in his ways.

When our first baby was 20 months old he cried almost every night and my husband would spank him and throw him down in his bed. I called him a bad name and he choked me He has told me I wasn't fit to sleep on the bed and should sleep under it. his father lives with us and I have three babies now, making six in the family. It isn't at all pleasant having his father around as he is very disagreeable and careless. I hire nothing done and do all my work well. I belong to two clubs and he acts mean about going. We had a club dance and he went to a movie and wouldn't go with me. I told him I couldn't stand to live this way and he said he didn't mind if I stayed out all night. I went to the dance with the crowd. Did I do right? When I tell something he contradicts me. If I insist he says I lie and so I have to keep still or quarrel. I go to movies once a week and he throws it up to me that I spend too much money. I haven't had a new dress for a year. Should I drop my clubs, give up movies and not have any pleasures just because he will not go? THANK YOU.

You certainly have trials and obstacles to overcome in order to obtain happiness in your domestic circle, but, my dear woman, you are tackling the situation selfishly. Recreation means a great deal in a woman's life, but pleasure seeking does not bring as rich returns as an unselfish effort to make a husband happy and to keep his love. Probably your husband suffers just as much from lack of harmony as you do. It must make him sick at heart to know how his old father irritates you. An old person is such a victim of habit that nothing but patience and gentleness could teach your father-in-law more agreeable and careful ways. Also you and your husband have grown away from each other to such an extent that it is not pleasure for either of you to be together. Probably the fact that he will not go hurts you more for the looks of it than because you cannot have his company. If giving up your clubs and other pleasures would bring domestic happiness I would certainly advise you to take that course, but you would feel a martyr and even your husband would not want you to give up affiliations which should bring you recreation and pleasure. Personally I think it was a mistake that you "rowed" over a dance and then went alone.. My advice is to consider the comfort and happiness of your husband first. When he sees you are genuinely interested in him, he will do much more to make you happy.

Boy Does Not Answer Letters.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl in my middle teens. I have written to a boy from another town for quite a while. He did not answer my last letter as soon as I thought he should and so when I wrote him I was rather harsh. He has never answered. I would like your advice as to whether I should write again as I regard his friendship very highly. PAT.

You should not write again. the second letter was a mistake. and a third one would be just that much worse.

1,000,000 Americans Are Drug Users Says Head of Maccabees

DETROIT, Mich.—More than 1,000,000 people in the United States are victims of the drug habit. The average age of the heroin addicts is twenty-two years. America consumes four times as much "dope" as all Europe combined.

These startling facts were pointed out by A. W. Frye, supreme commander of the Maccabees, in an address here, in which he outlined the society's Americanization program in connection with the automobile caravan to Washington next Summer.

Indoor parks in buildings of steel and glass are advocated as all-year recreation centers.

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS

BY MRS. ELIZABETH A. THOMPSON

Does Not Like Love Making.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: How can a girl tell whether she loves a boy or not. I have been going with a boy for fifteen months. He says he loves me and wants me to be engaged. I can't tell whether I love him. I do not want him to kiss me and it embarrasses me terribly when he asks. Would I tell this way if I loved him? When he lays his hands on me familiarly I almost hate him and feel like telling him I will never see him again. Would I feel like this if I loved him? How can I make him understand that I do not like this? I don't know how to tell him and sometimes think it would be the easiest way not to see him again without any explanation.

I have plenty of boy friends and some of them want to go with me, I don't dare tell my friend as he doesn't like to have me even ask to go.

Do all boys do things they shouldn't after they have gone with a girl for some time. Will they do this if they love and respect her?

LITTLE SENIOR.

It may be that you have been educated to feel that it is wrong to have a boy want to kiss and love you. In that case you will probably become less embarrassed and less distressed as time goes on, because most boys make such advances. Your boy friend has not done anything out of the way in asking for kisses, because it is so evident that he loves you and wants you to marry him. It is not right, however, for young men to ask for a girl's kisses and love without proposing marriage.

I hardly believe you love the young man who cares for you, because if you did you would probably want him to make love to you. Love is still so new to you that you cannot judge. Wait until you know in your heart what love is.

I think it would be better to tell your friend frankly that it embarrasses and distresses you to have him make love or touch you. When he realizes that you are sincere, he will not be so free.

Go with other boys too, because a girl in her high school years is too young to settle down with one person. Even if the boy you have been going with doesn't like it, he will have to get used to having you go with other boys too. Don't ask his permission in such a matter.

Fiance's Visits Stop.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl twenty-three and in love with a young man of twenty-four. He says he loves me dearly. I don't know what the matter is because he has not been over for some time and I don't even know if he is angry at me. The last time he was over we were the best of friends. We were going to be married a month from the time he stopped coming. Do you think he will ever come to see me or should I let him go? I surely do think a lot of this boy. I could not stand to give him up. My folks have thought a lot of him ever since I started going with him.

BROKEN HEARTED GIRL.

It looks very much as if the young man found he did not love you enough to marry you and he lacked courage to tell you. By staying away he is letting you see that he no longer cares. The thing for you to do is to face your disappointment bravely, showing much courage as the multitudes of others who are suffering from a broken heart but concealing the fact. Try not to suffer from humiliation and memories, but look for happiness in each day as it comes. If you meet this experience which has come into your life philosophically, not letting it dim your eyes to oother blessings, it will not be long before you are yourself again, fully recovered from your disappointment.

The Other Side.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: There are always two sides to a story. You printed one side to a story which has been very much misrepresented in most of its details. It told how parents owning a large farm and raising a good girl on it sent her through high school. In the fall they placed her in a business school. This much was correct. The story goes on that they paid her tuition and that an aunt and uncle persuaded her to leave school, got her a job and rented her a room at $2 a week, and moved her into their home sometime before her parents knew of it. A postscript was added that the girl, under age, was being forced to live in the home of consumptives.

The real story is this: When they placed her in the business school they placed her in a wealthy home where she could assist with the housework for her room and board. They paid ten weeks' tuition. At the end of four weeks her eyes gave out and she went home to her parents for almost a week. Besides they were disappointed in the school because she was doing work which she had already taken in high school. Upon investigation they were informed at the high school that she was already qualified for a position. She returned to the home she was in and found the room was wanted for another girl. It was then my niece came to my house. She was not able to get an office job because of no openings and because her parents failed to get her glasses. She took a a job clerking for $12 a week. Her parents, finding she was working, asked for $25 for wasted tuition. She returned that sum and bought the fall clothing which her parents failed to get her. By dong this she has not been able to give me one cent for the room and board. She was going home each week-end and when her father brought her back he talked to us apparently all right. As for consumption, it has been more than eight years since I had it. I was under close watch for a year and after that was well. The city board of health and also the state board dismissed my case seven years ago. Since then I have been able to do anything I cared to and for more than two years have managed a large apartment house in addition to the household duties for a family of six. During the time I was sick my sister, her husband and children visited me and ate meals here on the average of once a week. My sister is now trying to persuade her daughter to give up her work here and keep house for a widower with four children. The girl cries to me and says the shoes not want to do housework. She does not want to disobey her mother. Her parents threaten to give her $5 in their will if she does not submit to living with this man.

AUNT OF THE KIDNAPPED DAUGHTER.

Your niece might silently resist her parents, doing what she believes to be right. It will be hard for her to disobey, but if she knows in her own heart they are unjust in their demands that should comfort her. If legal action is taken by the parents to make her return to them, she ought to secure the services of an attorney to present her side of the case. Of course there is the danger that the parents will disinherit her as they threaten. If the estate is considerable or worth fighting for I would advise her to consult a lawyer at once. After he has investigated both sides of the case he will be able to advise her more satisfactorily than I would after hearing the two letters with their equally sincere appeals for help.

Husband is Irritable

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been married 14 years and have lived very happily until five years ago. My husband is seven years older than I and has become irritable and old in his ways.

When our first baby was 20 months old he cried almost every night and my husband would spank him and throw him down in his bed. I called him a bad name and he choked me. He has told me I wasn't fit to sleep on the bed and should sleep under it. his father lives with us and I have three babies now, making six in the family. It isn't at all pleasant having his father around as he is very disagreeable and careless. I hire nothing done and do all my work well. I belong to two clubs and he acts mean about going. We had a club dance and he went to a movie and wouldn't go with me. I told him I couldn't stand to live this way and he said he didn't mind if I stayed out all night. I went to the dance with the crowd. Did I do right? When I tell something he contradicts me. If I insist he says I lie and so I have to keep still or quarrel. I go to movies once a week and he throws it up to me that I spend too much money. I haven't had a new dress for a year. Should I drop my clubs, give up movies and not have any pleasures just because he will not go? THANK YOU.

You certainly have trials and obstacles to overcome in order to obtain happiness in your domestic circle, but, my dear woman, you are tackling the situation selfishly. Recreation means a great deal in a woman's life, but pleasure seeking does not bring as rich returns as an unselfish effort to make a husband happy and to keep his love. Probably your husband suffers just as much from lack of harmony as you do. It must make him sick at heart to know how his old father irritates you. An old person is such a victim of habit that nothing but patience and gentleness could teach your father-in-law more agreeable and careful ways. Also you and your husband have grown away from each other to such an extent that it is not pleasure for either of you to be together. Probably the fact that he will not go hurts you more for the looks of it than because you cannot have his company. If giving up your clubs and other pleasures would bring domestic happiness I would certainly advise you to take that course, but you would feel a martyr and even your husband would not want you to give up affiliations which should bring you recreation and pleasure. Personally I think it was a mistake that you "rowed" over a dance and then went alone. My advice is to consider the comfort and happiness of your husband first. When he sees you are genuinely interested in him, he will do much more to make you happy.

Boy Does Not Answer Letters.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl in my middle teens. I have written to a boy from another town for quite a while. He did not answer my last letter as soon as I thought he should and so when I wrote him I was rather harsh. He has never answered. I would like your advice as to whether I should write again as I regard his friendship very highly. PAT.

You should not write again. the second letter was a mistake, and a third one would be just that much worse.

Runyon Says

The Burly Boys Keep Coming.
Tom Kennedy Has the Biggest.
Do You Remember Rufe Turner?
His Old Manager Digs Up a Hevy.

By DAMON RUNYON

TRAMP, tramp, tramp—perhaps it should be tramps, tramps, tramps—the heavyweights come.

The writer not long ago printed a list of more than FIFTY men now active in the heavyweight division.

Since then he has been advised of many others he never heard of before. Some he will never hear of again. That will be very nice.

Tom Kennedy was one of the many heavyweights of the White Hope era.

That was the time when John Arthur Johnson, a negro, was champion of the world, and everybody was running around looking for a big white man to lick Johnson.

They called the massive products of this period "Hopes of the White Race." If our citizens ever display the same concern for the education and general uplift of the white race that they did in finding a man who could out-slug Johnson, this will be a highly cultured land.

Kennedy was a big, good-looking young fellow in those days, a fine boxer, and INTELLIGENT. He was so intelligent that as soon as he discovered there were a lot of men he couldn't whip in the prize ring he sought something that promised more of a future.

Kennedy went into the moving picture game on the Pacific Coast. He has recently returned to pugilism, but on the BUSINESS end—as promoter, matchmaker and manager. Kennedy knows you can't get those cauliflower ears spoinging fighters off.

Of course Kennedy has a heavyweight. Every manager has. Some have two or three. Kennedy's heavyweight is Ralph Smith, of Los Angeles, former amateur champion of the Pacific Coast. Kennedy thinks he will become a great professional fighter.

Smith was a member of the Los Angeles fire department and met with a severe accident that kept him out of boxing more than a year.

He recently resumed the game, and Kennedy reports that he fought eight men in eleven weeks, winning all his fights, six, by knockout in less than four rounds.

Kennedy thinks Smith is the largest heavyweight in the game. He stands six feet, seven inches, weighs 220 pounds and has a reach of Eighty-five inches. That is a tremendous reach. His wrist measurement is eight and a quarter inches.

Smith is even taller than Jess Willard, the Kansas giant, who was the outcome of Kennedy's period, though Willard weighed more.

Size was the craze in the White Hope era. This writer thinks that speed is more important. A man weighing between 175 and 185 pounds, not over six feet tall, is big enough to beat Dempsey if he can out-speed Dempsey.

Young Mr. Jersey Jones, who abandoned a promising newspaper career to become a pugilistic manager, has the same idea as the writer.

Young Mr. Jones has a heavyweight prospect—another Smith. This Smith's first name is Dave. He lives in Rahway, N. J., is 23 years old, five feet eleven inches tall, and weighs 180 pounds.

"He is built for speed," young Mr. Jones writes, adding hopefully: "Some one of these days, Damon, I'll be handling a champion. I admit I haven't had much luck so far, but I'm sticking to it. During the past six years I've handled over one hundred battlers. A few have been fairly good, but the majority of them were total busts.

"Perhaps Dave Smith will develop into what I have been looking for—a champion? Who knows?"

That is the optimism of youth, a fine thing even in pugilistic management.

From Los Banos, Cal., comes a letter from Mr. J. H. Williams, enclosing a picture of a serious looking individual in pugilistic pose, announced as Sammy Olson, heavyweight.

Mr. Williams says Olson has whipped Pat Lester, the young man who is being promoted to pugilistic prominence on the west coast by Tim McGrath and "Spider" Kelly, famous veterans of another fistic day. Also, Mr. Williams says, Olson has defeated Tommy Gardener, a Pacific Coast heavyweight, who boxed in the East with indifferent success.

Lack of Practice Reason Given By Pennsylvanians

Practice Game With Newell Friday Afternoon Booked; Franklin and Marshall Here Saturday Night.

East Liverpool high school cagers will not play New Castle on Friday night, as originally billed.

Manager Bruce Perry today announced that the New Castle school athletic directors have definitely called off the contest.

The Pennsylvanians, it appears, started practice only yesterday and, although they had planned at first upon tackling Boone's lads, deemed it advisable last night to cancel the game.

As a result of the cancellation, there will be no Friday night engagement for the Blue and White, but, instead, an afternoon practice tilt with George Kidder's Newell high school lads.

This engagement will be staged in the local school gymnasium, beginning at 4 o'clock, and, according to announcement by Manager Perry, there will be no admission fee.

Disappointed by the loss of the proposed New Castle game, the local lads, however, still can look forward to something just as good for this week. The Franklin and Marshall academy five, of Lancaster, Pa., coached by Sam Taylor, former East Liverpool athlete, is scheduled to appear here on Saturday night.

KLESCH LOSES TO STRIBLING

Clevelander, However, Gives Georgian Hot Battle.

DAYTON, O., Dec. 16—Young Stribling, Georgia school boy fighter, won the decision over Johnny Klesch, of Cleveland, here last night in 12 rounds.

The boy from the Sunny South did not win, however, without a struggle. He was forced at top speed by a gallant and aggressive opponent, who survived a storm of well directed rights and lefts in the second, third and fourth sessions, then came back strong the remainder of the fight. The Cleveland Gladiator was in grave danger several times, for Stribling, with powerful southpaw hooks and sweeping rights that landed on Klesch with the rapidity of machine gun fire, had his adversary reeling and weakened. Stribling tried his utmost in the three rounds mentioned to finish matters, but the gong ended promising rallies in each instance and permitted Klesch to carry on.

After the fourth, the wonderful display of spirit on the part of the Clevelander in those black moments of defeat won the admiration of spectators. Not only did Klesch take all that Stribling had to offer but his defense tightened as the fray continued, while he proceeded to flare quite a few blows that found their mark on Stribling's face and body.

Nurmi Wants to Go Home; Dislikes Indoor Running

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—It is touch and go today as to whether Paavo Nurmi of Finland, the greatest runner of all time, will return to his native country without so much as placing a spike on an American track, or whether he will go through with his scheduled campaign in this country. Those in charge with Nurmi's training make no secret of the fact that he is disgusted with this first efforts to run indoors and that, if he followed his natural inclinations, he would take the first steamer home.

Hugo Quist, trainer of the Finnish American A. C., who is in charge of Nurmi's workouts here, reports that the Finn is a most difficult man to handle and declared this morning that he feared the great runner might step out on the program outlined for him.

"Nurmi is all right; he is training hard and is getting results," Quist told friends in this city. "But he is discouraged with his inability to stand the gaff of indoor running. He is talk about going home, and I don't mind admitting that I am plainly worried by the situation."

Nurmi is the Prima Donna type of Athlete. Anything he doesn't like he will speedily remedy, even if the remedy involves the cancellation of duly accepted invitations. He cares nothing except for Paavo Nurmi, and he has made it quite clear that the American indoor track is an abomination to him. Therefore, the only course open to him is to sail for home.

Quist and other officials of the Finnish-American club are making United efforts to keep the great runner in this country. But they do not attempt to deny that Nurmi can not hope to reach his best condition under the training he must undergo on indoor tracks. It is a new game to the Finn, and he finds it a hardship.

Last Saturday, he attempted a three lap workout on a local Armory floor during a set of school boy games The boys rubbed him for an hour afterward and they couldn't get the soreness out of his muscles. Nurmi, somehow, can not get the trick of indoor running. His outdoor work has left him sound and ready to go, but the minute he steps inside the business is off.

He had a time trial at the twenty-second regiment Armory last night. Much depends on the outcome. If Nurmi is satisfied with what the watch says he will stick. If not, he will sail on the first steamer headed for Finland.

The Pennsylvanians, it appears, started practice only yesterday and, although they had planned at first upon tackling Boone's lads, deemed it advisable last night to cancel the game.

As a result of the cancellation, there will be no Friday night engagement for the Blue and White, but, instead, an afternoon practice tilt with George Kidder's Newell high school lads.

This engagement will be staged in the local school gymnasium, beginning at 4 o'clock, and, according to announcement by Manager Perry, there will be no admission fee.

Disappointed by the loss of the proposed New Castle game, the local lads, however, still can look forward to something just as good for this week. The Franklin and Marshall academy five, of Lancaster, Pa., coached by Sam Taylor, former East Liverpool athlete, is scheduled to appear here on Saturday night.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—While "Cannonball Eddie" Martin worked like a Trogan in his training camp at Summit, N. J., for his battle with Abe Goldstein at Madison Square Garden Friday night for bantamweight championship honors, the boxing commission today appeared skeptical that Martin would make the required 118 pounds.

A deputy has been assigned by the commission to visit the Martin camp this afternoon and put Eddie on the scales.

KLESCH LOSES TO STRIBLING

Clevelander, However, Gives Georgian Hot Battle.

DAYTON, O., Dec. 16—Young Stribling, Georgia school boy fighter, won the decision over Johnny Klesch, of Cleveland, here last night in 12 rounds.

The boy from the Sunny South did not win, however, without a struggle. He was forced at top speed by a gallant and aggressive opponent, who survived a storm of well directed rights and lefts in the second, third and fourth sessions, then came back strong the remainder of the fight. The Cleveland Gladiator was in grave danger several times, for Stribling, with powerful southpaw hooks and sweeping rights that landed on Klesch with the rapidity of machine gun fire, had his adversary reeling and weakened. Stribling tried his utmost in the three rounds mentioned to finish matters, but the gong ended promising rallies in each instance and permitted Klesch to carry on.

After the fourth, the wonderful display of spirit on the part of the Clevelander in those black moments of defeat won the admiration of spectators. Not only did Klesch take all that Stribling had to offer but his defense tightened as the fray continued, while he proceeded to flare quite a few blows that found their mark on Stribling's face and body.

Weather conditions will be controlled with the aid of radio sets in the near future, according to scientists.

Nurmi Wants to Go Home; Dislikes Indoor Running

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—It is touch and go today as to whether Paavo Nurmi of Finland, the greatest runner of all time, will return to his native country without so much as placing a spike on an American track, or whether he will go through with his scheduled campaign in this country. Those in charge with Nurmi's training make no secret of the fact that he is disgusted with this first efforts to run indoors and that, if he followed his natural inclinations, he would take the first steamer home.

Hugo Quist, trainer of the Finnish American A. C., who is in charge of Nurmi's workouts here, reports that the Finn is a most difficult man to handle and declared this morning that he feared the great runner might step out on the program outlined for him.

"Nurmi is all right; he is training hard and is getting results," Quist told friends in this city. "But he is discouraged with his inability to stand the gaff of indoor running. He is talk about going home, and I don't mind admitting that I am plainly worried by the situation."

Nurmi is the Prima Donna type of Athlete. Anything he doesn't like he will speedily remedy, even if the remedy involves the cancellation of duly accepted invitations. He cares nothing except for Paavo Nurmi, and he has made it quite clear that the American indoor track is an abomination to him. Therefore, the only course open to him is to sail for home.

Quist and other officials of the Finnish-American club are making United efforts to keep the great runner in this country. But they do not attempt to deny that Nurmi can not hope to reach his best condition under the training he must undergo on indoor tracks. It is a new game to the Finn, and he finds it a hardship.

Last Saturday, he attempted a three lap workout on a local Armory floor during a set of school boy games. The boys rubbed him for an hour afterward and they couldn't get the soreness out of his muscles. Nurmi, somehow, can not get the trick of indoor running. His outdoor work has left him sound and ready to go, but the minute he steps inside the business is off.

He had a time trial at the twenty-second regiment Armory last night. Much depends on the outcome. If Nurmi is satisfied with what the watch says he will stick. If not, he will sail on the first steamer headed for Finland.

Runyon Says

The Burly Boys Keep Coming.
Tom Kennedy Has the Biggest.
Do You Remember Rufe Turner?
His Old Manager Digs Up a Hevy.

By DAMON RUNYON

TRAMP, tramp, tramp—perhaps it should be tramps, tramps, tramps—the heavyweights come.

The writer not long ago printed a list of more than FIFTY men now active in the heavyweight division.

Since then he has been advised of many others he never heard of before. Some he will never hear of again. That will be very nice.

One good smash on the nose often makes a useful citizen of some large young man who thinks he can win Dempsey's title.

However, you can't rule 'em off for trying, as they say at the race track.

Tom Kennedy was one of the many heavyweights of the White Hope era.

That was the time when John Arthur Johnson, a negro, was champion of the world, and everybody was running around looking for a big white man to lick Johnson.

They called the massive products of this period "Hopes of the White Race." If our citizens ever display the same concern for the education and general uplift of the white race that they did in finding a man who could out-slug Johnson, this will be a highly cultured land.

Kennedy was a big, good-looking young fellow in those days, a fine boxer, and INTELLIGENT. He was so intelligent that as soon as he discovered there were a lot of men he couldn't whip in the prize ring he sought something that promised more of a future.

Kennedy went into the moving picture game on the Pacific Coast. He has recently returned to pugilism, but on the BUSINESS end—as promoter, matchmaker and manager. Kennedy knows you can't get those cauliflower ears sponging fighters off.

Of course Kennedy has a heavyweight. Every manager has. Some have two or three. Kennedy's heavyweight is Ralph Smith, of Los Angeles, former amateur champion of the Pacific Coast. Kennedy thinks he will become a great professional fighter.

Smith was a member of the Los Angeles fire department and met with a severe accident that kept him out of boxing more than a year.

He recently resumed the game, and Kennedy reports that he fought eight men in eleven weeks, winning all his fights, six, by knockout in less than four rounds.

Kennedy thinks Smith is the largest heavyweight in the game. He stands six feet, seven inches, weighs 220 pounds and has a reach of Eighty-five inches. That is a tremendous reach. His wrist measurement is eight and a quarter inches.

If size were the chief requisite, Kennedy would have been a good candidate.

Smith is even taller than Jess Willard, the Kansas giant, who was the outcome of Kennedy's period, though Willard weighed more.

Size was the craze in the White Hope era. This writer thinks that speed is more important. A man weighing between 175 and 185 pounds, not over six feet tall, is big enough to beat Dempsey if he can out-speed Dempsey.

It's Dempsey's speed more than anything else that makes him a great fighter.

Young Mr. Jersey Jones, who abandoned a promising newspaper career to become a pugilistic manager, has the same idea as the writer.

Young Mr. Jones has a heavyweight prospect—another Smith. This Smith's first name is Dave. He lives in Rahway, N. J., is 23 years old, five feet eleven inches tall, and weighs 180 pounds.

"He is built for speed," young Mr. Jones writes, adding hopefully: "Some one of these days, Damon, I'll be handling a champion. I admit I haven't had much luck so far, but I'm sticking to it. During the past six years I've handled over one hundred battlers. A few have been fairly good, but the majority of them were total busts.

"Perhaps Dave Smith will develop into what I have been looking for—a champion? Who knows?"

That is the optimism of youth, a fine thing even in pugilistic management.

From Los Banos, Cal., comes a letter from Mr. J. H. Williams, enclosing a picture of a serious looking individual in pugilistic pose, announced as Sammy Olson, heavyweight.

Mr. Williams says Olson has whipped Pat Lester, the young man who is being promoted to pugilistic prominence on the west coast by Tim McGrath and "Spider" Kelly, famous veterans of another fistic day. Also, Mr. Williams says, Olson has defeated Tommy Gardener, a Pacific Coast heavyweight, who boxed in the East with indifferent success.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

BY NORMAN E. BROWN

One of these days Jack Dempsey is going to be flattened for the long count and a new champion set up in his place. Dempsey being a very able-bodied, sure fisted young man at the present time, who we seek to visualize the man who ultimately will wrest the title from him, we are prone to picture some raw youth now toiling in a mine, a shop or on a farm ignorant, as yet, of the destiny which awaits him. As a matter of fact—and this particular fact has its basis in the record books—the man who will beat Dempsey is fighting today. Moreover, it is a two to one shot, according to the book, he was fighting when Dempsey battered Willard into submission at Toledo. So says an eastern sport scribe who continues.

John L. Sullivan won the heavyweight championship from Paddy Ryan in 1882 and held it for ten years, when he was beaten by James J. Corbett. Now, Corbett did not embark upon his ring career until 1885, three years after Sullivan won the title but, with the exception of Willard, who was a product of a peculiar situation in boxing, Corbett was the only man to win the championship who was not fighting at the time the championship was won by the man he defeated.

Corbett lost to Bob Fitzsimmons in 1897 and Fitz's record reveals he first boxed professionally when he took part in a tournament in 1880, thought it was not until 1889 that he may be said to have begun to follow the game for a living. At any rate this later date preceded Corbett's winning of the title by three years.

Fitzsimmons, in turn, lost to James J. Jefferies in 1899 and the book shows the conqueror of Lanky Bob took up the business of fighting in 1896, when Corbett's reign still had a full year to go. Jeff retired in 1904, but came out of retirement in 1910 to meet Jack Johnson, who had beaten Tommy Burns, claimant of the title as a result of his victories over a number of second raters during Jeff's period of idleness. Johnson, who clinched the championship by beating Jeffries at Reno, dates the beginning of his service in the ring to 1899, the year in which Jeff first knocked out Fitzsimmons.

Then Willard loomed on the scene. Willard, a farmer and horse trader in Kansas, was one of the horde which flocked to the ring in response to a call for a white man to beat Johnson, who had made himself obnoxious to followers of the game, and his first appearance within the rope was not until 1911, a year after Johnson had reached the top of the heap. Winning the title in 1915, Willard surrendered in 1919 to Dempsey, who had begun to fight the same year Willard toppled the negro in Havana.

Encouragement for Contenders

Which brings us down to the present. The leading contenders for the heavyweight championship at this writing are Harry Wills, Tom Gibbons, and Jack Renault, with outside chance accorded for the sake of argument to Luis Angel Firpo, who already has had one crack at it, and Ermino Spalla. If these men seek encouragement in their quest they may get it from their records. Wills began to fight in 1911, Gibbons in 1913, Spalla in 1918 and Firpo and Renault year that Dempsey scaled the heights in 1919—either before or in the same

It may be that one of the younger heavyweights around the country—Tony Fuente, for instance—will become the next champion, but, as the foregoing illustrates, the dope is against them. Whether or not the dope proves to be good in this case, it illustrates clearly one point; that it takes a man of considerable experience in a rough school to win the title.

BRITISH ROYAL CHRISTMAS CARDS LIKE THOSE OF ORDINARY MORTALS

LONDON—Royal taste in Christmas and New Year greeting cards is not much different than that of the ordinary mortal. At least the choices of the members of the English royal family are not out of the ordinary.

The King's card shows Charles I granting the Pilgrim Fathers the charter which was necessary to raise the Puritan settlement of Massachusetts to a colony. The card bears the Shakespearean quotation: "The Heavens give safety to your purposes," followed by "greeting and all good wishes for a happy Christmas."

On the Queen's card there are a Sphnix and a pyramid, past which Mary and Joseph are journeying on their way to Egypt with the Holy Child.

Under the picture is the Biblical quotation: "He took the young child and his mother departed into Egypt." Inside there is a verse of poetry and on the opposite side of the folder the greeting, "with every good wish for a happy Christmas and a glad New Year."

The Prince of Wales' card beats a reproduction of Bernard Gribbie's painting of the state barge of Venice conveying the Doge and the council into the Adriatic for the ancient ceremony of the "espousel of the sea."

The quotation: "Each day a gem wrought in a golden setting of happy thoughts and fairest memories" is followed by the word's "Christmas greetings and all good wishes for a bright and happy New Year."

Dowager Queen Alexandria has chosen a religious subject, the picture on her card portraying the birth of Christ. Princess Mary's card portrays the escape of Mary Queen of Scots from Lochleven Castle.

Glasses for Colorblind.

Victims of color blindedness will hail the new development in optical science that enables correction of color blindedness with glasses. This defect is due to the eye not differentiating different colors with the varying wave lengths of light. It is now proposed to adjust the eyes with the use of colored glasses. This development is still in its early stage.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

BY NORMAN E. BROWN

One of these days Jack Dempsey is going to be flattened for the long count and a new champion set up in his place. Dempsey being a very able-bodied, sure fisted young man at the present time, who we seek to visualize the man who ultimately will wrest the title from him, we are prone to picture some raw youth now toiling in a mine, a shop or on a farm ignorant, as yet, of the destiny which awaits him. As a matter of fact—and this particular fact has its basis in the record books—the man who will beat Dempsey is fighting today. Moreover, it is a two to one shot, according to the book, he was fighting when Dempsey battered Willard into submission at Toledo. So says an eastern sport scribe who continues.

John L. Sullivan won the heavyweight championship from Paddy Ryan in 1882 and held it for ten years, when he was beaten by James J. Corbett. Now, Corbett did not embark upon his ring career until 1885, three years after Sullivan won the title but, with the exception of Willard, who was a product of a peculiar situation in boxing, Corbett was the only man to win the championship who was not fighting at the time the championship was won by the man he defeated.

Corbett lost to Bob Fitzsimmons in 1897 and Fitz's record reveals he first boxed professionally when he took part in a tournament in 1880, thought it was not until 1889 that he may be said to have begun to follow the game for a living. At any rate this later date preceded Corbett's winning of the title by three years.

Fitzsimmons, in turn, lost to James J. Jefferies in 1899 and the book shows the conqueror of Lanky Bob took up the business of fighting in 1896, when Corbett's reign still had a full year to go. Jeff retired in 1904, but came out of retirement in 1910 to meet Jack Johnson, who had beaten Tommy Burns, claimant of the title as a result of his victories over a number of second raters during Jeff's period of idleness. Johnson, who clinched the championship by beating Jeffries at Reno, dates the beginning of his service in the ring to 1899, the year in which Jeff first knocked out Fitzsimmons.

Then Willard loomed on the scene. Willard, a farmer and horse trader in Kansas, was one of the horde which flocked to the ring in response to a call for a white man to beat Johnson, who had made himself obnoxious to followers of the game, and his first appearance within the rope was not until 1911, a year after Johnson had reached the top of the heap. Winning the title in 1915, Willard surrendered in 1919 to Dempsey, who had begun to fight the same year Willard toppled the negro in Havana.

Encouragement for Contenders

Which brings us down to the present. The leading contenders for the heavyweight championship at this writing are Harry Wills, Tom Gibbons, and Jack Renault, with outside chance accorded for the sake of argument to Luis Angel Firpo, who already has had one crack at it, and Ermino Spalla. If these men seek encouragement in their quest they may get it from their records. Wills began to fight in 1911, Gibbons in 1913, Spalla in 1918 and Firpo and Renault year that Dempsey scaled the heights in 1919—either before or in the same

It may be that one of the younger heavyweights around the country—Tony Fuente, for instance—will become the next champion, but, as the foregoing illustrates, the dope is against them. Whether or not the dope proves to be good in this case, it illustrates clearly one point; that it takes a man of considerable experience in a rough school to win the title.

BRITISH ROYAL CHRISTMAS CARDS LIKE THOSE OF ORDINARY MORTALS

LONDON—Royal taste in Christmas and New Year greeting cards is not much different than that of the ordinary mortal. At least the choices of the members of the English royal family are not out of the ordinary.

The King's card shows Charles I granting the Pilgrim Fathers the charter which was necessary to raise the Puritan settlement of Massachusetts to a colony. The card bears the Shakespearean quotation: "The Heavens give safety to your purposes," followed by "greeting and all good wishes for a happy Christmas."

On the Queen's card there are a Sphnix and a pyramid, past which Mary and Joseph are journeying on their way to Egypt with the Holy Child.

Under the picture is the Biblical quotation: "He took the young child and his mother departed into Egypt." Inside there is a verse of poetry and on the opposite side of the folder the greeting, "with every good wish for a happy Christmas and a glad New Year."

The Prince of Wales' card beats a reproduction of Bernard Gribbie's painting of the state barge of Venice conveying the Doge and the council into the Adriatic for the ancient ceremony of the "espousel of the sea."

The quotation: "Each day a gem wrought in a golden setting of happy thoughts and fairest memories" is followed by the word's "Christmas greetings and all good wishes for a bright and happy New Year."

Dowager Queen Alexandria has chosen a religious subject, the picture on her card portraying the birth of Christ. Princess Mary's card portrays the escape of Mary Queen of Scots from Lochleven Castle.

Glasses for Colorblind.

Victims of color blindedness will hail the new development in optical science that enables correction of color blindedness with glasses. This defect is due to the eye not differentiating different colors with the varying wave lengths of light. It is now proposed to adjust the eyes with the use of colored glasses. This development is still in its early stage.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

BY NORMAN E. BROWN

One of these days Jack Dempsey is going to be flattened for the long count and a new champion set up in his place. Dempsey being a very able-bodied, sure fisted young man at the present time, who we seek to visualize the man who ultimately will wrest the title from him, we are prone to picture some raw youth now toiling in a mine, a shop or on a farm ignorant, as yet, of the destiny which awaits him. As a matter of fact—and this particular fact has its basis in the record books—the man who will beat Dempsey is fighting today. Moreover, it is a two to one shot, according to the book, he was fighting when Dempsey battered Willard into submission at Toledo. So says an eastern sport scribe who continues.

John L. Sullivan won the heavyweight championship from Paddy Ryan in 1882 and held it for ten years, when he was beaten by James J. Corbett. Now, Corbett did not embark upon his ring career until 1885, three years after Sullivan won the title but, with the exception of Willard, who was a product of a peculiar situation in boxing, Corbett was the only man to win the championship who was not fighting at the time the championship was won by the man he defeated.

Corbett lost to Bob Fitzsimmons in 1897 and Fitz's record reveals he first boxed professionally when he took part in a tournament in 1880, thought it was not until 1889 that he may be said to have begun to follow the game for a living. At any rate this later date preceded Corbett's winning of the title by three years.

Fitzsimmons, in turn, lost to James J. Jefferies in 1899 and the book shows the conqueror of Lanky Bob took up the business of fighting in 1896, when Corbett's reign still had a full year to go. Jeff retired in 1904, but came out of retirement in 1910 to meet Jack Johnson, who had beaten Tommy Burns, claimant of the title as a result of his victories over a number of second raters during Jeff's period of idleness. Johnson, who clinched the championship by beating Jeffries at Reno, dates the beginning of his service in the ring to 1899, the year in which Jeff first knocked out Fitzsimmons.

Then Willard loomed on the scene. Willard, a farmer and horse trader in Kansas, was one of the horde which flocked to the ring in response to a call for a white man to beat Johnson, who had made himself obnoxious to followers of the game, and his first appearance within the rope was not until 1911, a year after Johnson had reached the top of the heap. Winning the title in 1915, Willard surrendered in 1919 to Dempsey, who had begun to fight the same year Willard toppled the negro in Havana.

Encouragement for Contenders

Which brings us down to the present. The leading contenders for the heavyweight championship at this writing are Harry Wills, Tom Gibbons, and Jack Renault, with outside chance, accorded for the sake of argument to Luis Angel Firpo, who already has had one crack at it, and Ermino Spalla. If these men seek encouragement in their quest they may get it from their records. Wills began to fight in 1911, Gibbons in 1913, Spalla in 1918 and Firpo and Renault year that Dempsey scaled the heights in 1919—either before or in the same.

It may be that one of the younger heavyweights around the country—Tony Fuente, for instance—will become the next champion, but, as the foregoing illustrates, the dope is against them. Whether or not the dope proves to be good in this case, it illustrates clearly one point; that it takes a man of considerable experience in a rough school to win the title.

BRITISH ROYAL CHRISTMAS CARDS LIKE THOSE OF ORDINARY MORTALS

LONDON—Royal taste in Christmas and New Year greeting cards is not much different than that of the ordinary mortal. At least the choices of the members of the English royal family are not out of the ordinary.

The King's card shows Charles h granting the Pilgrim Fathers the charter which was necessary to raise the Puritan settlement of Massachusetts to a colony. The card bears the Shakespearean quotation: "The Heavens give safety to your purposes," followed by "greeting and all good wishes for a happy Christmas."

On the Queen's card there are a Sphnix and a pyramid, past which Mary and Joseph are journeying on their way to Egypt with the Holy Child.

Under the picture is the Biblical quotation: "He took the young child and his mother departed into Egypt." Inside there is a verse of poetry and on the opposite side of the folder the greeting, "with every good wish for a happy Christmas and a glad New Year."

The Prince of Wales' card beats a reproduction of Bernard Gribbie's painting of the state barge of Venice conveying the Doge and the council into the Adriatic for the ancient ceremony of the "espousel of the sea."

The quotation: "Each day a gem wrought in a golden setting of happy thoughts and fairest memories" is followed by the word's "Christmas greetings and all good wishes for a bright and happy New Year."

Dowager Queen Alexandria has chosen a religious subject, the picture on her card portraying the birth of Christ. Princess Mary's card portrays the escape of Mary Queen of Scots from Lochleven Castle.

Glasses for Colorblind.

Victims of color blindedness will hail the new development in optical science that enables correction of color blindedness with glasses. This defect is due to the eye not differentiating different colors with the varying wave lengths of light. It is now proposed to adjust the eyes with the use of colored glasses. This development is still in its early stage.

REHEARSING FOR XMAS CANTATAS

Rehearsals are going forward for the cantata to be presented in the Second Presbyterian church Christmas evening. Members of the choir and Sunday school will take part in the program. Owing to these activities there will be no mid-week prayer meeting services in the church for the next two weeks.

Cantatas will be given in several of the churches Sunday evening.

LODGEMEN PLAN TO ATTEND MEET

Members of Pennova lodge, No. 880, Odd Fellows, plan to attend the Valley meeting to be held Friday evening in the I. O. O. F. building, Sixth street.

Delegations will be present from every lodge in this section including Smith's Ferry. Social time will be held in conjunction with the lodge session.

Funeral services for James Ernest, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Hazlett, who died Sunday at the family home in Cleveland avenue, were held this morning at 11 o'clock.

Burial was made in Spring Grove cemetery.

Missionary Meeting.

Members of the Young Women's Missionary society of the Second Presbyterian church will meet this evening with Mrs. John E. White of St. George street. Miss Inez Derringer will be associate hostess.

Mid-Week Services.

Mid-week prayer services will be held tomorrow evening in the churches of this section of the city. Pastors will be in charge of the devotionals.

Fish Flour Makes Giants

Dr. Victor G. Heiser, director in the Far East of the International Health Board of the Rockefeller Foundation, has been convinced of the claims made by the Japanese Institute of Nutrition that a certain flour made from fish powder, actually does increase stature. The flour is made from cooked and boned fish. Strangely enough it is an American chemical manufacture byproduct, and it is though it will correct short stature that has been produced by an unbalanced diet over a long period of years.

A device that sprays chickens as they enter or leave the poultry house is to be placed on the market.

DAMAGE SUIT IS INSTITUTED

Action Follows Crash of Machines On Salem-Lisbon Road.

Suit for $5,000 for personal injuries and $150 damages to his automobile, Commodore Perry and Mabel Perry have filed a petition in court against Edwin Harsh, of Kensington.

The history of the cause of this action, as related in the petition, is to the effect that on September 1 the car Harsh was driving on the Lisbon-Salem road crashed into the machine Perry was driving, throwed Mabel Perry from her seat, breaking two of her ribs and caused other internal injuries from which she has not recovered.

The Perry car was trailing two other cars that were being driven slowly back of a threshing outfit, the petition relates.

It is also claimed by the plaintiff that the car contained four people, two men and two women, and that the license plates it carried were those issued for a coupe, and that the Harsh car was being driven at a reckless rate of speed. The plaintiff is represented by Attorney Frank Cope.

Township Trustees Fail to Sell Bonds For Improving Road

Failure on the part of the trustees of Knox township to sell a bond issue for the share of the township in the cost of improving the Harrisburg-Wellsville road, from Westville west, caused a postponement in the letting of contracts by the state highway department at its recent road letting.

The cost of this improvement, which is to be shared by Knox township and also Smith township in Mahoning county, and in which the state has placed $5,000, has been estimated at $109,033.

All legislation has been passed by the Knox township trustees, but their bonds were not sold in time to have the money certified to the state highway department in time to open bids at the December letting.

Unless there is further unexepcted delay, the bids for the improvement of this road will be opened at the January letting.

CLERK OF COURTS LISTING CASES

The bar docket for the January, 1925, term of court is now being prepared by Clerk of Courts John T. Burns, and will be available for distribution within the next fortnight, it is said.

The January term of common pleas court will open January 12, and the April term will begin April. The September term of court next year will begin September 21.

Two sessions of the court of appeals will be held in this county next year, the first session opening April 6 and the second session on November 9, 1925.

It is very likely that the bar docket for the January term will show more cases listed on the assignment docket than appeared on the bar docket for the September term of court.

PETITION SEEKS SALE OF PROPERTY

Claiming that a judgment was obtained in the court of Justice of the Peace P. V. Mackall March 31, last, for $64.56, James S. Rinehart and others of East Liverpool have filed a petition in court asking that the common pleas court issue an order of sale for certain property in the Blackmore addition, East Liverpool, owned by George Little.

The Moore Furniture company, of East Liverpool, has filed a similar petition on the same grounds, its judgment for $52.56 having also been obtained in the court of Justice Mackall. In the petition in this case the Potters' Savings and Loan company have been named party defendants.

GRACE LAUGHLIN SUES FOR DIVORCE

Declaring in her petition that she had been ill treated by her husband and that she had to pay the rent of her home and purchase other necessities for their house, Grace M. Laughlin, East Liverpool, has filed an action for divorce in common pleas court against her husband, Frank M. Laughlin.

Mrs. Laughlin recites that she has been compelled to seek work as a stenographer, and that Laughlin has failed, neglected and refused to provide for her.

The petition shows that the couple were married in Lisbon November 5, 1921. The plaintiff asks the court for a decree of divorce and restoration to her maiden name, that of Grace M. Henderson.

Held to Court.

After being arrested on a charge filed by Myrell Steffel in the court of Mayor G. E. Russell, of Salem, Robert Davis has been bound over to common pleas court, the transcript in the case having been filed with Clerk of Court John T. Burns.

U. S. FARM CENSUS NOW IN PROGRESS

A federal farm census is now being taken in every township in Columbiana county. The record, it is claimed, will be the most complete ever gathered. The census will show just how many people are engaged in farm activities in the county, how many acres are being tilled, the number of head of different live stock, and whether or not there has been an increase or decrease in the number of those engaged in farming during the last ten years.

Taking this census record has been in progress for several weeks, but it will be at least another month before the task is completed, so far as the field work is concerned.

POULTRY EXHIBIT IN NEW LOCATION

Instead of holding their annual poultry show in the Lisbon City Building, west Lincoln Way, and which was formerly known as the Bradberry hotel. The change of location was made because it is possible to take care of a larger entry list in the latter building than would be possible in the City Building.

Entries from East Liverpool and Salem are now being received, it was announced by Secretary C. A. Albright Wednesday.

Damages Sought.

Claiming that their farm property has been damaged because of the pollution of a stream of water flowing through it, Clande Lambright and Sarah E. Lambright have filed a petition in common pleas court, asking $5,000 damages from the city of East Palestine.

This is another of the sewage disposal plant damage actions which have been filed against the city of East Palestine.

Seek Missing Man.

Radio listeners Tuesday night were asked for information concerning the whereabouts of W. G. Walters, formerly of Johnstown, Pa., and whose mother is critically ill, at her home in Johnstown.

It was broadcasted that Walters left his home two years ago, and when last heard of was in Chicago, he was about to leave for Ohio.

Wine Pudding Has Kick; Woman Swears Off it in Court

DETROIT.—Wine pudding may produce quite a "kick," Hattie Wilson, thirty-three, testified before Judge Harry B. Keidan. The court evidently agreed with her, and she was sentenced to the House of Correction for ten days or she must pay a fine of $10.

Miss Wilson was attending a party at which wine pudding was served, she said. She boarded a street car and spilled cakes and pudding on the car.

"I'll never eat wine pudding again," said Miss Wilson, after hearing the court's yerdict.

Tip For Beginners.

Solve this puzzle by comparing the synonyms listed in the "Horizontal" and "Vertical" columns with the number of spaces extending crosswise or downward on the diagram, as the case may be. If a word occurs to you meaning substantially the same as the synonym and the correct number of letters to fit in the spaces between its number and the first shaded stop following, write it in lightly. Work away the small words, the "easy" words, first, and they will give you plenty of clues to the difficult ones.

Pumpkin Pies — Make two crusts day before and put in ice box until ready to use next day. While making filling place crusts in oven and allow to bake until set, then pour in filling; Two beaten eggs, two-third cup sugar, two cups pumpkin, one and one-half teaspoon cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon cloves, one-fourth teaspoon ginger, two teaspoons flour, pinch baking powder, one quart milk (hot).

Frosting for Cakes — One tablespoon butter melted, one pound confectioners' sugar, scalding milk enough to spread, one-half teaspoon vanilla. Frost six cakes, then add pink coloring and frost six more. Then add one tablespoon cocoa and finish. These cakes are quickly made and the children love the colored frostings.

SUGGESTION

In making her baby's layette one young mother thought that the seams in the little skirts were rather bulky, no matter how tiny they were. She crocheted the buttonhole stitch in white along both sides, the armhole and neck. Then with different color she crocheted the two sides together. This made the skirt softer and added a trimming. A dainty edge may be attached to the neck and armholes.

Brewis

Old fashioned brewis is a dish that can be used to save stale bread. Dry the bread and roll down to crumbs, sift to have them the same size. Bring a pint of milk to boiling, add a little salt, stir in crumbs enough to thicken to a porridge, cook for ten minutes, add a lump of butter, a tablespoon of sugar, the same of honey, and serve cereal fashion with cream. If the crumbs are of several different kinds of bread, so much the better, for they improve the flavor.

LONDON.—A British citizen, Tress Hart, of London, has become the virtual owner of the Cameroons, the ex-German protectorate.

Alarm was caused in Britain when the government decided to sell this property. It was believed that in open sale it would revert to German ownership.

But by the payment of the sum of 209,550 pounds (out of a total of 224,679 pounds realized by the sale) Hart has gained undisputed control over the land.

He declares that he will not sell any of his holdings to German nationals.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead o serious lung trouble. You can stop them ow with Creomulsion, an emulsified creoote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion s a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Runyon Says

Ball Players Are Civic "Ads." They Make Many Towns Famous. What's the home of Tris Speaker? You know Answer, Hubbar, Tex. Football Has Outgrown Experts.

By DAMON RUNYON.

BIG league ball players should be dined and possibly wined in their home towns when they return for winter hibernation.

Their chambers of commerce, their rotary clubs, and their other organizations devoted to municipal uplift, should properly recognize these young gentlemen as objects of great civic value.

Many small towns that would otherwise linger in more or less obscurity are frequently made famous throughout the land through the baseball prowess of their boys who go forth to the big leagues every Summer.

The writer thinks that the professional ball-player has an advertising value to a community that is rather generally overlooked. And some communities spend much time and money devising means of calling the attention of the world to themselves.

Have you ever thought of it from that angle?

Hundreds of thousands of persons who wouldn't have known of the existence of the town, know of Hubbard, Texas, because it is the home of the great Tris Speaker.

It is a name as familiar in New York, Cleveland, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, St. Louis, and the other big cities as the name of Coffeyville, Kansas. And everybody knows that Coffeyville is the home of Walter Johnson. Also Johnson made famous the name of Weiser, Idaho, because he started his baseball career there.

At first they called him "The Weiser Wonder." After that he became the "Coffeyville Cyclone." Another small town in Kansas—Circleville—is noted as the home of the Barnes boys, Jesse and Virgil.

The name of Factoryville, Pa., is remembered in the big towns of the country. It produced Christy Mathewson, for years the baseball idol of the biggest city in the land.

Many earnest gentlemen have been spending much time the past few weeks producing their ideas of an "All American" football eleven supposed to represent the best football playing talent in the country.

They might just as well undertake to select eleven "All American bricklayers, or carpenters. It would be quite as representative.

Football has grown beyond the experts. It is played throughout the country. Unlike baseball, the best talent is not centered in two compact leagues where it can be neatly observed, studied, compared. There are no definite figures, such as batting and fielding averages, by which a man's ability can be gauged.

You find in small, obscure colleges football players who are better than any you see on the teams of the large colleges. You find in some sections of the country a game improved far beyond other sections.

Years ago an expert could sit down and pick eleven men from Yale, Harvard and Princeton teams and say, "Here are the best players in the country."

Nobody disputed the assertion. Nobody felt they dared dispute the assertion. There weren't enough other football players in the country on which to base a dispute.

And probably the expert was right in those days. Football had been developed at Yale, Harvard and Princeton beyond any other colleges or sections. They had a greater stock of player material to draw from; they had more money; they had stronger encouragement.

Even allowing a shade for the snobbishness of those who used to do the All-American picking in ignoring the existence of other colleges, it is conceivable that the Yale, Harvard and Princeton players of years ago were the best.

But Yale, Harvard and Princeton now merely struggle along with the procession in football. Sometimes they find it difficult to keep up.

Other colleges grow in size, found football attractive. The game progressed, became interesting to the general public, where in the beginning it was a good deal of a mystery and a bore to the casual observer.

Where once the average man in the street didn't know anything about football, regarded it as a game peculiar to high-brow colleges, and didn't want to know anything about it, nearly every American is earnestly seeking a ticket to the nearest field.

Football once belonged essentially to the classes in this country. Now it's in the hands of the masses. That always makes a big difference in sports—or anything else.

Football players, more than any other athletes, are subject to violent reversals of form. They are even worse in that respect than race horses.

In one game a man may be a tremendous player. In his next game he may be a total failure. It is, of course, the opposition—the resistance, the style of play—he encounters. He is like the fighter who makes a great showing against a mediocre opponent and is what they call, in pugilistic parlance, "a bum" against a good man.

When you find a football player who sustains his ability against all opposition across a couple of seasons you have a truly great player, they are very rare.

Scores of football players have had one great day in their entire gridiron careers. Some of them are still remembered by the public for that one great day.

Football more than any other sport places the high premium of fame on the spectacular—on a single flashy incident such as the dropkick that wins a game. The man who accomplishes the feat becomes celebrated, though he may do nothing else the balance of his career.

Then some other chap will plug along obscurely in the line for three years rendering stalwart service yet never be noticed.

A lot of men are always in there in the line of work-a-day events, pulling and hauling against commercial adversity, taking the hard bumps of the opposition tacklers, trying to hold steady, but attracting no attention.

In bobs some nimble-footed fellow, who couldn't under any circumstances withstand the pounding they have to take and the leader hands him the opportunity for an easy kick to success.

The business world stands up and cheers, forgetting the stalwart linemen who held the line against the possibility of a break through while the nimble-footed chap was kicking.

It's enough to make a man sore, isn't it.

And yet something must be said for Nimble Foot, though he had an easy change.

It must be said he made the most of opportunity.

Remember—HE MIGHT HAVE MISSED!

Ruppert Strives to Avert Threatened Baseball 'War'

Olive Branch Will Be Tendered Judge Landis In Chicago

Barnard, of Cleveland, and Shibe, Philadelphia, Also Members of Peace Committee; Proposed Trades Discussed.

CHICAGO, Dec. 17.—The olive branch will be tendered Judge K. M. Landis, high commissioner of baseball, today and hopes are entertained that the threatened "war" may be averted.

Colonel Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees, will be the official olive branch toter. He will hold a conference with Judge Landis before the joint meeting of the National and American leagues and expects to iron out the difficulties existing between the commissioner and Ban Johnson, head of the American league. He will be assisted by E. S. Barnard of Cleveland and Tom Shibe of Philadelphia.

Neither Landis nor Johnson had given out anything for publication before the joint session got under way. Rumors were current that both the judge and Johnson would resign. But they were simply rumors.

John McGraw of the Giants and C. A. Comiskey, owner of the White Sox, are antagonistic to Johnson and report has it that they will make the going rough for the American league head. However, Ruppert wants the junior organization to go ahead peacefully about its business and wants to put the kibosh on all harsh words. It is predicted that he will have his way.

"It all depends on how successful the peace committee is in adjusting affairs with the judge," one magnate said this morning. "Naturally the commissioner is sore about the harsh things Johnson is reported to have said about him, but he may be appeased when the peace committee assures him there will be no repetition of these utterances."

Magnates and managers spent the early hours before the meeting in discussing trades. So far none materialized.

LUTHERAN FIVE EASY WINNER

Down Chester Presbyterians, 39-5, in League Game.

In a basketball contest that was too one-sided to be interesting the Lutherans scored an easy victory over the Chester Presbyterians in a Sunday School league contest on the high school floor last night by the score of 39 to 5.

The Lutherans took a commanding lead in the first half, tallying 21 points to their opponents' two, the Chester lads failing to make a field goal in the half.

It was the same story in the second half, the Lutherans scoring the points at will that meant victory. The Chester lads scored their only field goal of the game in the last half, Plotts being the lad who turned the trick. G. Woessner was the scoring ace of the game, with Anthony a close second. Every one of the Lutherans with the exception of Kibble figured in the scoring.

McDevitt and Plotts starred for the Chester Presbyterians.

Wisner, Slab Star Of International, Going to Giants

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—John Wisner, of the Rochester club, star pitcher of the International league, will wear a New York Giant uniform next season, it was announced today.

Wisner is six feet in height and weighs 195 pounds. He won 18 games and lost 15 last season. He is a right hander.

BOLES' FIVE WILL TAKE ON TIREMEN

WOOSTER, Dec. 17.—The Wooster college basketball team will get a real test this week. Friday night Coach Boles will take his squad to Akron to play the Firestone five. He is expected to take a squad of twelve and all of the men are expected to get into the fray.

Last Friday evening Boles took his team to Mansfield and won from the Mansfield Daily News team, 46 to 22. The game was a nip and tuck affair for the first half which ended with Wooster leading, 15 to 14. In the second half the Collegians got started and scored almost at will. The scoring honors were about even. Love, caging six field goals, was Wooster's high point man. Boles used nine men in this game.

Four new eligible men have added greatly to Wooster's strength this season. These men are Dodez of Mt. Eaton, Love of Akron South and Gee of Youngstown who are forwards, Anderson of Cleveland Shaw as a center and McGlaskan of Canton McKinley who is a guard.

In addition to these men Coach Boles has six letter men left from last season. These men are Pfeiffer, Hurst, Manly, Mitchell, Starn and Langell. Pfeiffer will not be available for the preseason games as he is still nursing an arm injured in football.

During the holidays the team will go to Jamestown, New York, and will play several games with strong teams in that section of the state. Coach Boles will send a squad of ten men on that trip.

In three months this year 209 deaths resulted from automobile and motorcycle accidents in the home has been perfected.

DECLARE FIRPO WILL BE NEW MAN

NEW YORK, Dec. 17—South American friends of Luis Firpo, Argentine heavyweight, today were prophesying that when Luis comes back from Paris, he will be a "new fighter."

Firpo sailed from New York on a last minute hunch. He signed a contract with Jimmie DeForest before leaving, to become his trainer and manager.

"When I return," said Luis, "I want to meet Charlie Weinert again and look for another match with Jack Dempsey."

Mike is Convinced He Can't Win Title From Mat Champion

For the fourth time, last night he attempted to wrest the heavyweight wrestling crown from Ed. "Strangler" Lewis, and for the fourth time he met defeat. He got one thrill last night, however, by winning the first fall in 3:42 after a series of head locks. The champion took the second in 1:04:55 with a toe hold and head scissors, and the third in 8:02 with a reverse body lock.

One-wire anthenna for commercial radio has been found practical.

Play Four Years On Ashland Squad; Awarded Blankets

ASHLAND, O., Dec. 17—Purple and gold blankets, the reward of four years' service on the football team, today were in the possession of Wharton, McClintock and Rowsey, of Ashland college, following the banquet last night, at which Paul Kellogg was elected captain of the 1925 team, succeeding Schuyler Wharton. Letters were given to eleven members of the squad.

Cage and Volley Ball Squads Play At "Y" Tonight

In the solo basketball encounter of the evening, the Liverpool Motors will mix with Laughlin 6 cagers.

TONIGHT

So Fast He Leaves Them Dazed!

Fast? Say, girls, they just have time to say: "Here he comes!—There he goes!"
